

ECCLES URGES U. S. TO USE GOLD PROFITS FOR TEN-YEAR LOANS TO SMALL BUSINESS

LIDDELL ORDERED HELD ON CHARGE OF SLAYING WIFE

Children Testify About Drinking and Father Ejecting Man From House; Tell of Beating.

Testimony of a triangle—of heavy drinking by the wife and third party, leading to the husband's beating of the wife—brought a coroner's jury to recommend yesterday that Edwin C. Liddell, prominent Tech alumnus and customers' man for a brokerage house here, should be held on a murder charge.

Liddell's three children—especially his daughters, Helen, 10, and Anne, 8—gave sensational testimony of their father's returning home Saturday afternoon, ejecting a man whom they named as Ralph McConnell from the house, and beating and kicking their mother while exclaiming: "Bleed some more! Bleed some more!"

Body Found Saturday.

The wife, Mrs. Rose Liddell, was found battered and lifeless late Saturday night at the home, 57 Thirteenth street, N. E., after the husband had called a physician.

Verdict of the coroner's jury was: "We find the deceased came to her death from fracture of skull and massive brain hemorrhages produced by the deceased being struck by Edwin C. Liddell with some object or objects. We recommend that the said Edwin C. Liddell be held on a charge of murder."

Liddell Silent.

Liddell, who was represented by Attorney Hugh Howell, flinched slightly but made no comment when the verdict was read. He was returned to a cell at police headquarters which he had occupied.

Bill Passed To Fine Anti-U. S. Agitators

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—The house passed and sent to the senate today a bill providing a $5,000 fine or a five-year prison sentence for any person advocating overthrow of the government by force or violence.

The provision was offered by Representative McCormack, Democrat, Massachusetts, as a rider to a bill by Representative Walter, Democrat, Pennsylvania, to increase the punishment for espionage from two to ten years' imprisonment. The rider was accepted 352 to 17.

Taxi Passenger Takes

42-Mile Ride, $5.80, Cab

A nonchalant hold-up man last night robbed a cab driver of $5.80 in cash at the point of a pistol and later, after riding 42 miles through the city, decamped with the cab.

T. T. Collins, 27, of 850 McDonough street, told police that a man entered his cab at the bus terminal and ordered him to drive to a North Boulevard address. Remark: "This is business," he thrust a pistol in the driver's neck and robbed him. Much later, on Fourteenth street, the man ordered the driver to alight, and drove away.

Busy Washington Preens For Royal Visit Thursday

Window Space Along Route Rents for From $1 to $5 a Head.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—Growing more excited with each passing minute, Washington bustled today with last-minute preparations to gape, gasp and exclaim over their majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Up and down Pennsylvania avenue, bits of bunting began appearing, hinting only at the gay decorations which will adorn the route on Thursday, when the British monarchs parade in state from Union station to the White House.

With minute care, secret service, police and army and navy officials studied and restudied their elaborate plans for protecting the royal visitors against over-enthusiastic well-wishers and anyone with less kindly intent.

Shopkeepers along the avenue, already doing a depression-breaking business in the sale of seats at upper windows, anxiously tried to find space for more spectators at $1 to $5 each. They did so under the eyes of the secret service, its agents demanding exact lists of just who would be seated at each window.

At Demone's, caterers to the capital's diplomatic set, preparations were made for receiving 25,000 luscious, perfectly ripe Virginia strawberries, to be served with gallons of cream at the British luncheon.

COUNCIL SHUNTS CAB-TROLLEY WAR TO POLICE GROUP

Action Evokes Cries of 'Politics'; Ordinance To Ban Pin Ball Devices Also Is Side-Stepped.

The battle between the Georgia Power Company and the Black and White Cab Company over passengers reached the floor of city council yesterday but was shunted to the police committee amid cries of "politics" as the war started by 10-cent taxis last week drew in new participants.

Council also side-stepped the proposed ordinance banning owning or operating pin ball machines anywhere in Atlanta. It was referred to ordinance and legislation committee for later consideration.

Developments Listed.

Developments in the taxi-street car company controversy included:

1. The power company's proposed ordinance to ban "jitney" operation of taxis and the petition of A. L. Belle Isle, president of the cab company, to be allowed to operate 5-cent buses were referred to the police committee for hearing Friday, June 16.
2. The Atlanta Hotel Men's Association announced it will petition the mayor and council for permission to operate its own taxis for the benefit of hotel guests, claiming that they get no service from taxis now.
3. Approximately 100 drivers for the Belle Isle company sought temporary permits to drive cabs yesterday from Mayor Hartsfield but were told permits must be obtained through regular channels.
4. J. T. Odum, business representative of the cab drivers, released a statement he said was authorized by Charles B. Gramling, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, declaring the labor movement to be entirely neutral in the fight between the two big corporations here.
5. Councilman J. Allen Couch charged that the power company-taxi cab company matter was referred to the police committee "for an ulterior motive" and asserted that the councilmen voting to send it to this committee were playing politics. He sought to re-

MYSTERIOUS SHOT IS FIRED NEAR DUCHESS OF KENT

Police Seize Man; Window Shattered in Home of Princess Royal; Police Investigate Terror Plot.

LONDON, June 5.—(AP)—A sawed-off shotgun was fired near the Duchess of Kent, sister-in-law of King George, and at about the same time tonight a glass panel was shattered mysteriously at the home of the Princess Royal, the King's only sister, in two apparent attempts to terrorize or injure them.

Scotland Yard was reported to have under consideration whether responsibility lay with the Irish Republican army or sympathizers who have been charged with waging a campaign of bombing and terrorism in England.

Leaving Her Home.

The Duchess was leaving her fashionable Belgrave Square home for the movies when the shot was fired.

She was not injured and was said not to have been aware of the incident, which occurred between 10:30 and 11 p. m. (5:30 and 6 p. m., Atlanta time), until after she had viewed the film, "Wuthering Heights" at the Gaumont theater. With her was Lady Portlinton.

Police overpowered and arrested an unidentified man seen near the Duke of Kent's house shortly after the shot was heard and later picked up the shotgun in the square.

House Is Guarded.

The Duke of Kent, who had dined with the Duchess at home, had left a few minutes before her to fill a speaking engagement. Police immediately put a guard around the house.

Detectives said they had found a circular hole in the center of a pane of a bay window at the house of the Earl of Harewood, husband of the Princess Royal.

The Duke of Kent, fourth son of the late King George V, and the Duchess are to leave England next October for Australia where the Duke will be Governor General of the dominion.

The Duchess has two children, Prince Edward, born in October, 1935, and Princess Alexandra, born on Christmas Day, 1936.

L. D. SCOTT DIES; HEAD OF SEMINARY

Credited With Develop- ing Washington Into Outstanding Institution

Llewellyn Davis Scott, principal of Washington Seminary for the last 35 years and one of the best known educators in the south, died at a private hospital last night after a brief illness. He was 67 years of age.

Long an outstanding leader in Atlanta's civic and social activities, he was credited with the development of the seminary into an outstanding educational institution. He first became connected with the school in 1894 when it was under the direction of his aunt, the late Mrs. Alice E. Chandler. He became principal after her death, 10 years later, and was assisted in its management by his sister, Miss Emma Scott.

Actively interested in sports, particularly tennis and golf, he was one of the organizers of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association which he served as president for five years. He also served as a member of the executive committee of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

For 12 years he served as a member of the board of directors of the Georgia State Highway Department.

Rivers Silent On Report Of Probe Group

Indicates He'll Await Public Reaction to Economy Recommendations.

By Associated Press.
Alternately praised and criticized by state administration officials, the report of the house economy investigating committee raised the question yesterday of highway fund diversion.

Governor Rivers, who has lent an attentive ear to agitation for a sales tax, received copies of the committee's revenue recommendations in silence. Declining to comment until he had time to study the proposed solution to Georgia's fiscal problem, the chief executive nevertheless reminded reporters "we still need $8,500,000 to balance the budget."

Governor Rivers gave no hint whether he would call the general assembly into extra session to act on the report and indicated he would await public reaction to the economy recommendations.

Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, asserted Georgia's school teachers "were dumbfounded" when the committee's report "ignored the $5,200,000 past due them by the state of Georgia for this year's teaching. The term "diversion of highway funds" was used by Representative John C. Parker, of Colquitt, speaker pro-tem of the house of representatives and occasional dissenter with administration policies.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 5.—(AP)—He couldn't keep his mind on work. The pattering rain made the cozy chair and piles of magazines doubly enticing.

Cuba Grants Asylum To 907 Refugees

Offer Conditioned on Guar- antee Stay Will Be Temporary.

HAVANA, June 5.—(AP)—The wandering liner St. Louis today was granted conditional permission to land its 907 refugee German Jews on Cuba's Isle of Pines for a temporary stay.

President Federico Laredo Bru, granting the qualified permission, gave Jewish aid organizations until tomorrow noon to accept the conditions.

Laredo Bru said the refugees might land if they agreed to live in a concentration camp which would be established on the Isle of Pines and if guarantees were given that their stay would be temporary.

(Tropical Radio reported the St. Louis had messaged it was en route to the Isle of Pines.

(The message was received about 8 p. m. The liner then was at least 200 miles distant, but did not give its position, the radio station stated. Earlier, Captain Gustav Schroeder had notified the Associated Press in Miami that his vessel was 60 miles due east of Daytona Beach, Fla.)

In an official statement today the President declared that if any navigation company pretended to be able to land more immigrants in Cuba "then they were only trying to take advantage of permits given previously by the immigration department when they were notified beforehand that such permits were nullified by the new regulations."

Meanwhile, appeals by Professor Albert Einstein and Stephen S. Wise that the refugees be permitted to land in Panama were rejected by the President of Panama, Dr. Juan Demostenes Arosemena.

Officials Survey Proposed Atlanta-Pittsburgh Air Line

Pennsylvania-Central Seeking Permission From CAA To Operate New Southern Routes; Two Planes a Day From City Planned.

Ranking officials of the Pennsylvania-Central airlines arrived here yesterday on a survey flight of their proposed new southern routes, including a direct line from Atlanta to Pittsburgh.

They included C. Bedell Munro, PCA's president; L. P. Arnold and F. R. Crawford, vice presidents; Captain J. H. Carmichael, operations manager; George Mason, and three hostesses now in training for service on the line's routes.

The company made application to the Civil Aeronautics Authority several weeks ago for permission to operate the routes. If approved, plans call for two planes a day between Atlanta and Pittsburgh, via Knoxville and Charleston, W. Va. The planes will carry 10 passengers, mail and freight.

Terminal facilities will be provided at the municipal airport, employing about 10 persons, all Atlantans.

The line will tie Atlanta in with Pennsylvania-Central's system, now operating from Pittsburgh to Buffalo; Baltimore to Buffalo; Pittsburgh to Washington, Richmond and Norfolk, Washington to Baltimore, and Pittsburgh to Akron, Cleveland, Detroit, Traverse City and Sault Ste. Marie; from Detroit to Chicago, Detroit to Mil-

PLAN ADVOCATED TO FILL UP GAP IN FINANCIAL SYSTEM

Hanes Tells House Group To Push Tax Revision; Adjournment Date Not Set Yet, F.D.R. Informed

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP)—Use of part of the profits from gold devaluation as "a cushion" for a liberal new system of loans to small business was urged on congress today by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

The former Utah banker and leader among the administration's "spending-lending" school told a senate banking subcommittee his proposals would help fill a "gap in our financial mechanism" that retards small and medium-sized business and industry.

About the same time Undersecretary John W. Hanes, of the Treasury, urged a house committee to press ahead with a revision of business taxes in the interests of business recovery.

Backed Morgenthau.

Hanes, one-time Wall Street broker, supported earlier recommendations of Secretary Morgenthau for tax revision to remove "tax irritants" and so-called business "deterrents."

While congressional committees wrestled with the complicated problems of business recovery, senate and house leaders informed President Roosevelt at their weekly White House conference that they were uncertain as to when congress could wind up its legislative tasks and adjourn.

The chief executive has been delaying fixing a date for a trip to the Pacific coast pending adjournment plans.

No Date Agreed Upon.

Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, one of the congressional leaders at the White House, said no date for adjournment was agreed upon, that the President had not fixed his departure time, and that there was no decision on neutrality legislation, possible snag to any adjournment plans.

Eccles told senators his proposed new system for loans to small business "in no way involves competition with banks or private business or calls for a budgetary outlay."

He explained that the Treasury had a book profit of about $2,800,000 resulting from reduction of the gold content of the dollar. Congress, he added, authorized use of $139,000,000 of this profit when it set up the government insurance for bank depositors.

Of this, he said, only $27,000,000 had been used. He proposed that

City Typhoid Deaths Fall During 1938

Rate Among U. S. Lowest; Fatalities Mostly From Outlying Area; Toll in Diphtheria Rises

Atlanta's death rate from typhoid fever in 1938 was among the lowest in the United States, while the mortality rate from diphtheria ranked with the highest in the nation, according to detailed reports in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report reveals the typhoid death rate was 0.9 per 100,000 of population as compared with 1.9 in 1937. However, diphtheria took a heavy toll, giving the city a rate of 4.0 and placing it in the column with seven other cities with the highest diphtheria rate for 1938.

In both instances, however, one-third or more of the reported deaths were said to be among non-residents—a condition which was especially prevalent in the south.

Hospital Centers.
Large cities serve as hospital centers for the neighboring suburban and rural areas, which are without adequate means of caring for the communicable diseases and which frequently suffer from the want of whole-time local public health supervision, it was pointed out.

Atlanta's typhoid record is in keeping with a general downward trend in the death rate in virtually all of the large cities of the United States. For the 78 cities for which complete data are available since 1910, there occurred 248 deaths from typhoid in 1938, which is the lowest on record. There were 280 in 1937 and 336 in 1936. The rate for this group of cities is for the fourth consecutive year less than 1.0. The rate for the 93 cities studied in 1938 also is below 1.0 (0.74) and below the corresponding rate for 1937 (0.82).

A steady decrease in deaths from typhoid in Atlanta has been chalked up since 1906. The record follows:

1906-1910 Period.
In the period from 1906 to 1910, Atlanta has 58.4 deaths per 100,000 population. From 1911 to 1915 this figure was reduced to 31.4; from 1916 to 1920 it was trimmed to 14.2; from 1921 to 1925 it bounced up to 14.5, but came down to 11.1 from 1926 to 1930; dropped to 7.2 from 1931 to 1935, then to 3.2 in 1936, 1.9 in 1937 and 0.9 in 1938.

Only one city in South Atlantic states had a lower rate in typhoid for 1938 than Atlanta. This was Norfolk, Va., with a rate of 0.8.

Of the eight cities ranking highest in deaths from diphtheria, Atlanta had the lowest. Her rate of 4.0 compares with Nashville's 4.3, Denver's 4.5, Indianapolis' 4.8, El

PUERTO RICO ASKS TO BE MADE STATE

Official Demands Quick Action on Governor's Election.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—Bolivar Pagan, vice president of the Puerto Rican senate, arrived by air from San Juan today bearing a demand for immediate statehood or the island's right to elect its own government.

The demands, adopted by a joint resolution of the Puerto Rican legislature, were presented by Pagan to Resident Commissioner Santiago Iglesias. The two officials said they would decide on a course of action after a conference with Rafael Martinez Nadal, president of the Puerto Rican senate.

Pagan said copies of the insular legislature's memorandum would be presented to President Roosevelt and to leaders in the senate and house.

the remaining $112,000,000 be utilized to set up a separate corporation for business loans.

This corporation could be established within the framework of the Federal Reserve system, Eccles said, or operated under "any other agency congress wishes."

Eccles said this corporation would make two types of loans: First, long-term loans up to $1,000,000 that might extend for 10 years or longer; second, loans from $500 to $25,000 which might extend for 10 years and which would be fully insured under certain conditions.

Would Meet Demands.
"These would meet in a liberal and practical way the credit need of small business," the fast-talking banking authority said, after telling senators that banks should not be criticized for refusing to take risks involved in loans to small business.

Eccles asserted that $25,000,000 capital should be used to create a "revolving fund that would supply $250,000,000 credit" for the smaller loans.

This, he added, would operate as a pool for loans made by banks so that all losses would be covered, providing the losses of any one bank were not more than 10 percent of its total of loans of this type.

Warns Senators.
In opening his testimony, Eccles said his proposals would be supplementary to a bill by Senator Mead, Democrat, New York, which calls for insurance of 90 per cent of loans by banks to small business.

Under questioning by senators, Eccles said this insurance pro-

U. S. JURY PROBES ANNENBERG TAXES

Publisher's Income Quiz Opens; Strict Secrecy To Be Maintained.

CHICAGO, June 5.—(AP)—An investigation of the income taxes of Publisher M. L. Annenberg was begun today by a federal grand jury.

District Attorney William J. Campbell outlined the case to the 23 jurors after they had been sworn in by Judge James H. Wilkerson and instructed to co-operate with the staff of government attorneys in preserving strict secrecy.

Campbell announced all persons except those participating in the inquiry would be barred from the corridors near the jury's quarters. He informed reporters 100 subpoenas had been issued but said the names of witnesses would not be disclosed and no reports on the investigation would be available.

He had reported earlier that "the entire Annenberg financial structure will be scrutinized during the proceedings," and that the jury would investigate "possible criminal intent to avoid payment of income taxes."

Annenberg, 61, is publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Daily Racing Form and New York Morning Telegraph.

He also publishes a number of magazines and is interested in companies furnishing racing news in many cities.

The district attorney reported the same grand jury would make a separate investigation of the income taxes of William R. "Billy" Skidmore, who has been identified by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney as one of the operators of a Chicago gambling "syndicate."

B. C. GOODPASTURE TAKES POST FRIDAY

B. C. Goodpasture, evangelist, who has resigned as minister of the Seminary Avenue Church of Christ to become editor of "The Gospel Advocate," Nashville, will assume his new duties Friday. Aside from his editorial duties, Mr. Goodpasture will serve as minister of the Hillsboro Church of Christ.

A farewell banquet was tendered Mr. Goodpasture and his family at the Candler hotel Saturday night. Among those present were Dr. C. H. Paine, toastmaster; Chief of Police Hornsby; H. C. Hale, minister of the West End Church of Christ; Roy H. Welch, of East Point Church of Christ; and S. J. Westbrook and Miss Ruth Ann Byerly, of the Seminole Avenue church.

Mr. Goodpasture will be succeeded at the Seminary Avenue church by J. Morris Powell, who comes from the Bardonia Road Church of Christ, Louisville, Ky., and who will preach his first sermon July 2.

FALL IN BATH HURTS BANKER R. S. PARKER

Federal Reserve President Forced To Cancel Trip.

Falling while in his bath, Robert S. Parker, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, suffered severe bruises Saturday morning and was unable to be at his desk yesterday.

Mr. Parker was scheduled to make the opening address to the Georgia Bankers' Association in Savannah Wednesday, but he notified them that his doctor declined to permit him to make the trip.

Malcolm Bryan, vice president of the bank, will deliver the address which Mr. Parker planned on the subject, "Present-Day Aspects of the Federal Reserve System."

posals "would be very disappointing" because banks would not care to advance funds if they had to bear the first 10 per cent of any losses.

Eccles also warned senators that no "lending device" would provide "the primary motive power to full recovery."

Agrees To List Theories.
Later the Federal Reserve head agreed to set down his recovery theories and appear again before the committee.

"This gets into endless controversy in the field of economics," he said. "I don't mind a controversy because I'm usually in one with somebody and I'd just as soon get into one with this committee as any."

Whether senators accepted his loan proposal or not, Eccles asked reduction of existing powers of the Federal Reserve to make business loans.

"They do not meet the situation," he said.

Loans Limited To 5 Years.
At present the Reserve System loans are limited to five years. They may be made for "working capital" of an established business.

In discussing tax revision with the house ways and means committee, Undersecretary Hanes said a reduction in government expenditures "alone will not balance our budget with a surplus sufficient to reduce the national debt."

The only solution, he asserted, is a "larger national income" attained through "more work, more investment, more enterprise."

ATLANTIAN PLUNGES 4 STORIES TO DEATH

Jobless Man Falls From 8th Floor of Building on Luckie Street.

Despondent and without work on hands, a 58-year-old man, identified by police as Edward H. Johnson, of 82 Bartow street, N. W., plunged from the eighth floor of the building at 145 Luckie street shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He died about four hours later at Grady hospital.

Police said a notation in a diary indicated suicide. The entry read, "May God bless my friends that have helped me. Unemployment and lack of funds make it impossible for me to get along."

The body was retrieved by firemen from the fourth floor level of another part of the building.

Radio Patrolmen Leo Nahlik and W. G. Scott reported they had taken Johnson to Grady hospital early Sunday night, after he had been found with his wrists slashed in the washroom of a downtown hotel.

The body was taken to the funeral home of J. Allen Couch where an inquest will be held at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

POLICE HERE TO SEE FBI MOTION PICTURE

Request for Films Made During Recent Visit of Hoover.

Atlanta's policemen yesterday prepared to attend school under the supervision of G-Man J. Edgar Hoover.

When Hoover was in Atlanta several days ago, Mayor Hartsfield requested him to send to Atlanta two reels of motion pictures which among other things tell how to apprehend criminals, how to put desperate men under arrest, how to disarm bad men and how to subdue fighting outlaws.

Yesterday the reels came, air express, and Hartsfield said every member of the Atlanta police department will be given the benefit of the successful G-man system. It is about an hour to show the reels, some of which are slow motion in order that officers can see every move.

generally as a "splendid piece of work," Parker observed:

"If the gasoline allocation is pegged at the 1938 figure and if there is an increase of $50,000 in dollars in revenue from gas tax in 1939, the additional million would go to the general fund and not to the highway department. And if the motor vehicle tags are pegged at the 1938 figure, even if there is an increase of $50,000 in this tax as estimated by the committee, this amount would go into the general fund and not into the highway and rural post roads program. All this amounts to diversion of highway money."

A high official of the Highway Department, who would not permit use of his name, also objected to the plan as "diversion," and predicted it could jeopardize Georgia's share of federal funds for rural post roads.

HOUSE PROBES LAUD LAW DEPARTMENT

The State Law Department was singled out for special praise by the house economy committee in its 500-page final report on Georgia's state governmental affairs, it was revealed today. The report stated that the probers found the law unit operating both efficiently and economically.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall, one of the state's best known officials, heads the law department. The committee report also recommended enlarged quarters and better working facilities for the legal staff.

Attorney General Arnall expressed gratification when advised of the praise his department had received from the house investigating committee.

"I am trying my best to do a good job as attorney general and it pleases me to know that the house economy committee has seen fit to praise our work," Arnall said.

The committee's report said the administration's "Little New Deal" would be financed on a $21,000,000 annual appropriation basis without increasing existing tax rates or imposing new levies.

Proposals Listed.
The report proposed to raise $4,300,000 additional revenue by tightening tax collections, repealing state income tax exemptions for federal tax payments, and by pegging gasoline and motor vehicle tax allocations at their 1938 peaks. Excess receipts would go into the general fund.

Administration partisans were critical of the report, and sources

Air Hostesses for New Line Visit Atlanta

AIR LINE OFFICIALS SURVEY NEW ROUTE

85,200 commercial passengers, and 602,678 pounds of mail handled at the airport last year by the 33 planes that arrive and depart daily.

The PCA officials flew in from Birmingham, where they attended the National Air Carnival. They leave this morning for Knoxville and Pittsburgh.

The hostesses, 19-year-old Betty Jane Hess, DeLene Stover and Erma Uhleman, competed with other airline beauties at the carnival for the title of "Miss American Aviation of 1939."

Honored at Dinner.
Last night the party was honored guests at a dinner at the Henry Grady given by the aviation committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Among those present were the committee's chairman, Jesse Draper; W. K. Jenkins, president, and Winthrop Nunnally, vice president of the Aero Club; Mayor Hartsfield, Cecil Hester, chairman of the aviation committee of city council; Major Wiley Wright, of the CAA; Major Ralph Lockwood; Jack Gray, manager of the municipal airport; Roy Ulrich, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; Frank Shaw, of the industrial bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, and others.

Arnold, one of the vice presidents, was a member of the original army round-the-world fliers in 1924. The plane he flew is now in the Smithsonian Institution. Carmichael, operations manager, is one of eight to have received the air mail pilot's medal. It was authorized by congress and presented to him by President Roosevelt on Easter Sunday, 1935, for landing safely a plane at the Washington airport after one of the three motors had fallen out, knocking off the landing gear as it fell. The accident happened 85 miles from the airport shortly after he had taken off with eight passengers.

close to the Governor's office summed up the feeling with: "The most charitable thing that can be said about the report is that it is a midsummer night's dream."

Report Lamented.
State Senator Paul Lindsay, of Decatur, staunch administration supporter, referred to the report as "something you would expect from schoolboys, not from grown-up men."

Representative Parker, however, lauded the general report and urged that it "not be judged too hastily by the public." He said more could be determined when the full report was presented to the assembly.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall commended the five-man investigating group for a "good and conscientious job," but warned most of the recommendations could not become effective until the legislature met and changed "a multitude of laws."

"State officials can't carry out the committee's recommendations now without violating the law," he explained.

Prior to release of the report, administration adherents said they found increasing sentiment for a special "tax" session to finance the state's withered program of services.

"I am ready and anxious to call the assembly at the earliest possible moment," said the Governor, "but not until I am convinced the members really intend to do something about this crisis."

DETECTIVE ON TRIAL IN MAN'S DEATH

T. J. Holloway Faces Charge of Manslaughter After Row Over Crash.

Trial of T. J. Holloway, railroad detective, on charges of voluntary manslaughter was opened in Judge A. L. Etheridge's division of Fulton county superior court.

Holloway was charged in an indictment with murder, but when the case was called, Assistant Solicitor General Quincy Arnold abandoned the murder charge and asked for a trial on manslaughter because of circumstances surrounding the death of James Tarlton, streetcar operator, on June 25, 1938.

Holloway and Tarlton were witnesses to an argument between two motorists as a result of a minor traffic accident, according to contents of the prosecution. The state attempted to show that Holloway joined in the altercation and fired a shot, which passed through the body of Homer Kerr, one of the motorists, and fatally wounded Tarlton. Kerr recovered.

John H. Hudson, attorney, is defending Holloway.

Economy Report

The report of the legislature's economy committee, together with the committee's contention that, if suggested reductions in departmental appropriations and suggested methods of increasing revenue from present sources are carried out, the state can continue its "Little New Deal" program without additional taxes, should be carefully scrutinized by all Georgians interested in the wellbeing of their state and its people.

There can be no disputing the desirability of avoiding new or additional taxes, if possible. The only question ever involved in the eternal tax question is whether or not the public service performed is worth the price paid in tax money for its support. In other words, all the taxpayers are concerned with is whether or not they get 100 cents, or more, in value for each tax dollar collected and expended.

Many of the recommended reductions in departmental appropriations are already, largely, in effect. This is through the reduced payments, under appropriations, resulting from the "grandfather" clause, when revenue drops below total appropriations.

On the whole the committee report is a thoughtful document and, in many of its recommendations, wise and conservative. There are, however, a few items mentioned where the committee has evidently failed to consider important factors, or has failed to follow through to the logical and ultimate conclusion.

In the column dealing with possible increased revenue from present sources, for instance, the committee estimates an additional collection of $1,500,000 per year in income taxes if the present regulation permitting deduction of money paid in federal income taxes is repealed. The committee has failed to take into consideration the larger taxpayers who would inevitably be driven from the state, taking their income payments with them, if this repeal went into effect. Some years ago, before the present rule was adopted, numbers of large property owners, properly residents of Georgia, moved to other states which did not inflict this burden, tantamount to double taxation. When this occurs the state not only loses all the income tax payments from these wealthy people, but also loses the estate taxes when they die. In one recent case alone it is estimated the estate tax loss—which went to Florida—was at least $1,500,000.

Even should the proposed repeal yield a direct increase of $1,500,000—which seems a highly optimistic estimate—the losses which would surely result would total much more than this, leaving the state worse off than it was before.

Again, the committee estimates an increased revenue of $250,000 by "plugging holes" in the present cigar and cigarette tax. This, presumably, means establishment of some bar to the influx of cigars and cigarettes from out of the state, direct to the consumer, thus avoiding the state tax. This may be possible, but it involves another setting up of interstate tariff barriers, no better than the Wisconsin taxes on products containing southern cottonseed oil, and contributing to the evil of state trade barricades which is already one of the most portentously disastrous developments in the United States of today.

The proposal to "peg" certain allocated funds at present yield appears wise and reasonable.

In regard to the State Department of Public Welfare, the committee recommendations of lessened administrative expense appear logical if conditions permit carrying them out. It must not be forgotten, however, that a large part of this expense is dictated by federal regulations, imposed because of the contributions by the federal government to benefit payments made through this agency. Likewise, the committee makes no recommendations as to payments to be made to the state's indigent aged, to dependent orphans, to the blind, etc. The committee leaves this entirely blank on the theory that it is a matter to be decided by the legislature.

This appears to be the crux of the situation. The budget could, possibly, be balanced if these and some other services are cancelled. The question is, do the people of the state want to abandon the program of social security and greater welfare for its neediest citizens? Whether a special session of the legislature is called soon, or later, that problem must eventually be decided.

It is estimated it would require $5,500,000 to pay all eligible beneficiaries under the state welfare program. Provision for this sum is not made in the economy committee report. The legislature, someday, will have to either provide this money, or at least part of it, or tell the old people of Georgia, the orphans and the blind, that the promise of state support made to them cannot be carried out, that the state government is forced to renege.

Walsh-Healey Amendment

The proposed amendment to the Walsh-Healey act would place an additional hardship upon one important southern industry, if not many others. Under the present act no government agency will buy from a manufacturer employing labor in excess of 40 hours per week with less than the prevailing minimum wage as determined by the secretary of labor, when the purchase amounts to $10,000 or more. The amendment would reduce this minimum to $2,000.

The lumber industry of the south is not and has not been flourishing to any great extent for a number of years. Yet, in the face of this persistent lag in business, the industry will be forced to adopt shorter working hours and pay higher wages under the fair labor standards act, another federal law. That is, if it would do business with the government in amounts exceeding $2,000.

Furthermore, the Public Contracts Board, which administers the act, is some two years behind in familiarizing itself with contracts already let, performed, or in process of being performed. If the act is amended to embrace the smaller transactions at a time when the administration agency is hopelessly buried in the administrative details of the act itself, how can the small southern lumber manufacturer, functioning under the board and faced with numerous other almost insurmountable obstacles, hope to keep his mill going?

The greatest problem facing the small lumber mill operator today is not whether he can meet the numerous wage and hour requirements of federal law, but how he can keep operating and pay wages of any kind. It is not a question of what he wants to do. Naturally, being human, he wants to run his mill, make a profit and in so doing employ workers. But, with everything fixed-by-law, except a fixed price for his lumber—which is against the law—he is always on the verge of shutting down or going into bankruptcy.

The worker is in a similar position. Although he is gratified with the idea of a minimum wage, he never knows even one day ahead whether he has a job or not. One thing he does know, however, is that a wage scale, no matter how attractive, without a job to go with it, buys no groceries for the wife and children.

Reassurance

The resilience of human nature, its amazing ability to "bounce back" to normal after looking horrible death in the face, was no better illustrated than in the case of Robert Galligan, young anthracite miner, who was dug out of a coal hole at Shenandoah, Pa., after 65 hours imprisonment under tons of dirt and rock.

The rescued son greeted his father with "H'ya pop, I'm O. K. but a little hungry." Once, during the rescue efforts, he shouted through a pipe, "Hurry up, I want to get home in time for dinner." At another time, during the rescue work, someone called to him: "Do you want to come up?" And Galligan promptly replied, "Yowah!"

Cheerful, breezy words from a person in a position as perilous and as nerve-racking as the one in which Galligan found himself. A sudden slide of rock trapped him in the mine. Although two companions escaped, Galligan was caught under the rock and dirt. Loose dirt covered the miner's refuge, a small chamber which did not cave in. Rescuers toiled without ceasing, first with a steam shovel and then with pick and shovel. A one-inch pipe driven through the wall of dirt gave the imprisoned man air—and his conversational opportunity. The rescuers reported they experienced difficulty locating the trapped man as they neared his shelter. Yet they could hear him singing!

Galligan's attitude was one of those reassurances that stand out brightly in days when so many are apt to take a defeatist view of life. Not intentionally, of course, but none the less effectively, he gave a lesson of courage, fortitude and cheerfulness.

Again, talk comes out of Detroit of placing the motive power in the rear, in the car of tomorrow, as in the mule.

If and when we burn the national mortgage, that mountain of debt will look like Vesuvius in full swing.

A question arises how to classify Mr. Bergdoll among imports from Nazi Germany. Would it be as an Ersatz American?

Editorial of the Day

A FAITHFUL HORSE

(From The Spartanburg Herald-Journal.)

Recently this newspaper commented on the story of a dog that was sacrificed by its owner when the animal undertook to retrieve a stick of dynamite that had been cast into a stream for the purpose of destroying fish.

Any yarn that has to do with the faithfulness of an animal is always of interest and a few days ago a reporter of the Associated Press at Seaford, Del., put this story on the wire:

"Old Pratt came back from the farm, plodded his familiar 'beat' through city streets for the last time last night, then died. Several weeks ago Pratt, Seaford's municipal work horse, was retired to the farm after 20 years of service. But he broke away and yesterday was seen again along the route he had covered each day pulling the city's trash wagon. At night he was found exhausted in his old stable. Veterinarians were called, but to no avail. Pratt's work was done."

Some men are that way. They resent retirement from work in which they have been employed most of their lives. Often they struggle back to the scene of their labor in a futile effort to carry on. When they fail and fall in the effort they probably meet the end they prefer. Work is the greatest privilege given to men. It was that way with old Pratt.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

POLITICAL HUMAN NATURE WASHINGTON, June 5.—The behavior of Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg is a fascinating study in human nature (political division). From 1936 until a few weeks ago, the least mention of the presidency caused the sonorous Michigan senator to wrap his toga closely round him and proclaim, "I wouldn't want the nomination on a silver platter." Few men in American history have been so vociferously not candidates. And now the Vandenberg candidacy is more open and further advanced than that of any other Republican.

An explanation of this sudden change of front is not far to seek. Naturally, Vandenberg always desired the presidency. A man who would willingly have been nominated in 1936—and Vandenberg was more than willing—would take an off-chance at any time. But it would seem that until recently Vandenberg considered the game not worth the candle. Indeed, in his more cynical moods, he used to be given to such remarks as, "Why should I kill myself to carry Vermont?"

Probably the last election, with its handsome Republican gains, was the moment when a new desire began to work in the Vandenberg mind. Three factors appear to have brought the ferment to a climax. First, the odoriferous McKay organization in Michigan was playing with the candidacy of Thomas C. Dewey in an effort to get not only the state's 1940 delegation, but also the senatorial nomination, away from Vandenberg. Second, the prospects of his nearest competitor, Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, were suddenly dimmed by an unfortunate speech at the Gridiron Club, leaving the field clear for another "normalcy" candidate. And, third, Vandenberg's friends, fearing to see their starter left at the post as in 1936, put on a big burst of pressure.

Vandenberg energetically denies having had anything to do with the call on him to run, from the Michigan legislature and the Michigan delegation in congress. If he did not, the stage was evidently set by some other master hand, for the call came too patly after the successful Vandenberg fight on the Florida ship channel. The Vandenberg answer, with its typical "Free-pledge" to be a one-term President wholly intent on "saving America," which brought him about as good publicity as any candidate could ask for.

Even now, Vandenberg is keeping up his charade of "not wanting" the presidency, and of not planning to "seek it." Probably he will not "seek" the presidency in the sense of hunting delegates in person, but it may be presumed that a Vandenberg organization of some sort will do the work for him. No one knows why it should be thought correct in a politician to imitate the Trojan women, who glanced backward as they fled, not too hurriedly, from the pursuing Greeks. But that is the tradition, and Vandenberg is following it.

BEHIND HIS FRONT Nevertheless, it must be remembered that all this posturing, which is natural in politicians anyway, gives an unfair impression of Vandenberg. He may be a thought too majestic, a thought too magnificently senatorial, for some tastes. Yet he is undeniably an able man who has built up a remarkable record in the difficult position of a member of the opposition, and can claim larger achievements than most other politicians. The defeat of the ship canal and Passamaquoddy, the drive for better sense in the social security act and the federal deposit insurance system are no mean accomplishments.

He started from scratch, as the son of a poor harnessmaker in Grand Rapids, and can boast a real success story. The story has its unfortunate passages—his youthful editing of a Grand Rapids paper, for example, and indulged himself in prose so grandiose that it makes Warren Gamaliel Harding's writings look homespun and simple. But the unfortunate passages chiefly concern moments when the Vandenberg propensity for self-dramatization became too strong. He knows this trait in himself, and laughs at it pleasantly. He is an immensely hard worker, an energetic orator, and an agreeable companion in private life. As a candidate, he will be a little to the right of center. His program will be disclosed as this is published, in a speech at Syracuse University, in which he will call for saving the best and scrapping the worst of the New Deal. At the same time, the fact that he is a businessman's (even a big businessman's) candidate can never be doubted, after his extreme pronouncements on the sit-down strikes and other labor problems. Altogether, he is just the sort of fellow an embattled middle class, annoyed by New Deal vagaries, might like to put in the White House.

On the Causes Of War.

Do you happen to know what is the basic cause of war? The real germ that brings that painful infection into the anatomy of the world and causes eruptions and boils and destruction and pain? If you do know this particular germ of the cosmos and can describe it in 3,500 words, there is a chance to profit by $50 by your knowledge.

For The North Georgia Review, a quarterly magazine published at Clayton, Ga.—a most distinctive publication, by the way, offering a prize for the best essay on "The Causes of War."

But there is a restriction. You are not allowed to use the words "democracy" or "Fascism" among your 3,500. As the announcement says, "those emotional quicksands being profitably deluged around the Clingman date of the contest is June 25, and there are the customary rules about return of manuscript only if adequate postage is attached to an addressed return envelope."

Now, you who think you can diagnose the disease called war, go to it. May you all win.

A Shrub On A Porch.

The lady is a fanatic about her garden. She is constantly seeking new and suitable examples of the flora of the region, to plant and to grow and to tend in just the right spot to add the touch of perfection to her landscaping, shrub and flower arrangements.

Sometimes the lady achieves triumphs by raising her shrubs from seed or cutting, all herself. On occasion, though, she sees some particularly fine specimen growing elsewhere and, being reasonably well provided in the matter of funds, sometimes she is able to purchase that fine specimen, as it stands, and have it transplanted to her own place.

The lady was riding through a strange portion of Atlanta, the other day. It was one of the less attractive negro residence sections, a route taken by her husband driving the car, to save distance and time.

The lady noticed a particularly undesirable looking house. Old and decayed, it looked like a perfectly horrible place for any humans to inhabit. She would, indeed, have been emotionally distraught had her pet dog been compelled to spend a night within the place.

But beside the porch of this wretched place was a particularly beautiful example of flowering shrub, in full bloom. She had never seen so fine a specimen. It surpassed, by far, the best in her garden or in the garden of any friend.

And she coveted that shrub. She determined to come back the following day, when she would have more time—and husband wouldn't be there to make his

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Mr. Mooney Now is the time for all good friends of Mr. Tom Mooney to organize an international society dedicated to the work of keeping Warren K. Billings in prison. As long as Mr. Billings remains behind the bars in Folsom, Calif., Mr. Mooney will have an excuse to abstain from common toil, but the minute the forgotten man of the historic dynamiting case walks out of prison Mr. Mooney will become fair prey for any sinister character who wants to walk up to him and offer him a job.

It might be hard on Mr. Billings to stay in Folsom, but it would be worse on Mr. Mooney to let him out. Not only would Mr. Mooney be exposed to employment—an awful fate for one who had abandoned work in the literal and arduous meaning of the word long before the dynamiting—but he would lose the mission in life which enabled him to appear at public ceremonies and accept ovations. Mr. Billings should be willing to make this sacrifice for one so much more deserving.

Moreover, the defense business would go into a tailspin, for with Mooney and Billings both out of jail and earning a living there would be no further excuse for the collection of funds for the support of selfless Communist workers for the cause of justice in this particular case.

Defense It was a sad day for the defense business when the state of California and the sometimes erratic but comparatively lenient American system of justice finally ejected Mr. Mooney himself from his status of distinguished guest in San Quentin prison.

Mr. Mooney, in his passionate admiration for Tom Mooney, the non-working friend of the American worker, had centered all the attention and publicity on himself and the public had all but forgotten that Mr. Billings was in prison, too, and the victim of an outrage no less vile than the one of which Mr. Mooney claimed to be a victim.

In his conversations at San Quentin, where he was allowed to hold press conferences and conduct an international propaganda through the Communists, Mr. Mooney rarely mentioned Mr. Billings, and when he was evicted by the American system of justice he was at a loss for a few minutes. But in this desperate situation Mr. Mooney thought fast and decided that it would be quite impossible for him to disappear into the obscurity of daily employment as long as Warren Billings remained in prison.

Billings Remembered He became suddenly very much aware that there was such a man as Billings and pledged himself to the sacred task of getting him out. That is nice work, and Mr. Mooney enjoys it thoroughly, not only because it protects him from contact with the time clock and the ordinary routine of working stiffs, but also because it affords him opportunities to accept ovations for Tom Mooney.

He once wrote that he had received "the highest tribute ever given a human being" when he returned to San Francisco, and the confession that he regarded himself as a human being was the only expression that he had uttered about Tom Mooney in years. It settled some doubts, too, because there were those who had gathered that he thought of himself as a god.

Mr. Mooney almost missed an ovation arranged in his honor by Communists on his arrival in New York to continue the not too dreary work of agitating for the release of Mr. Billings. It appears that he got in a couple of hours too early and found that the ovation was not due to start until the arrival of a later train. But Mr. Mooney is not one to deny the Communists a longed-for opportunity to express their admiration of Tom Mooney, so he waited patiently and then descended to the train level, where he entered and emerged to accept the tribute.

Not New This is not entirely new in the ovation line in New York, for pretty ladies and gentlemen of the moving picture business have staged arrivals in a similar manner and some are even said to have gone no farther than Yonkers to board trains and disembark, smiling for the cameras and the autograph fans, fresh from artistic triumphs in Hollywood.

For Mr. Mooney's own sake it will be earnestly hoped that he will not overdo his campaign to free Warren K. Billings. For if he should use just a half degree too much pressure Mr. Billings also might be turned out as a further vindication of American justice, and Mr. Mooney would be up against a fate which to one so long unacquainted with toil except by hearsay would be hardly preferable to death.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

ABLE-BODIED ON RELIEF One of the charges made in the relief investigation was that able-bodied people, a few of them, were on the rolls.

That is true. I would like to present one of them, selected at random. It is a case which can be multiplied in Fulton county by 500. The report, exactly as presented by the department, without any exaggeration or effort to present it as a "sob" story, follows:

"In November, 1938, Mrs. G. made application for assistance. In the home with her were four children under the age of 16, all of whom presented serious health problems. Mr. G. had deserted the family and left the state. Because he was out of the state, Mrs. G. had no funds or resources with which to have him brought back or prosecuted for non-support. Hence she was left with full responsibility for the children.

"We found that the children had been going to school in cold weather without adequate clothes or shoes. One child, a little girl age 7, became very ill in December with inflammatory rheumatism in her left leg as a result of attending school barefooted. Since that time the child has been in Grady hospital several times. It was necessary for her leg to be put in a cast. Later gangrene developed in that leg and she is back in the hospital, where she will probably have to undergo a rather serious operation on her left leg.

"Since February of this year, another daughter, age 15, has had to be under constant medical care and has been in Grady hospital several times. This girl is suffering from frontal sinus trouble and from osteomyelitis of the frontal bone. She is back in the hospital now and may have to undergo an operation on her head, which is serious because the infection is so near the area of the brain. The little girl, age 10, and the little son, age 9, are both markedly underweight and appear to be suffering from malnutrition.

"A pitifully small amount of assistance has been given this family in the form of federal surplus commodities and several small emergency relief orders. Because money is not available to assist families where the parents are able-bodied, this family has had to suffer great privation and actual hunger. These little sick children's condition is becoming worse, and there seems no chance of their making any sort of recovery until they can receive sufficient food and clothing. For quite some time they really need to have special care and a special diet, for which funds are not available. Mrs. G. is a pathetic figure, doing all she can for her little family, but with no way to go out and make anything for the family, even if she could get work out of her home, the situation would be much worse complicated because she is needed at home to care for the sick children and to look after these small children who are not old enough to be left alone. As far as we know, one of the main reasons why Mr. G. deserted his family was that he himself was in ill health and was so discouraged over how they might be taken care of that he seemed unable to face the responsibility any longer.

It so happens there is one more chapter. The appropriation was reduced May 1. Mrs. G. now faces eviction and the few pieces of furniture are about to be removed.

A mother with one sick child might consider the plight of Mrs. G. with her own children, for whom it may be assumed she has some measure of devotion. What is the responsibility. And whose?

500 AS PITIFUL There are 500 such cases in so far as need is concerned. There are 500 such as Mrs. G. with her own children were put into institutions the cost to the state would be much greater.

It is possible that relief has never had the proper introduction. The Community Chest does a better job of "selling" itself to the public. It has presented its needs emotionally. The welfare department has not. Yet perhaps it should. It is a well-known fact that no one gets excited. Yet one photograph of one baby left on a doorstep will bring dozens of people clamoring to receive it.

Not until Chairman Mitchell's excellent reply to charges had there been presented the emotional side of the picture. The whole pitiful parade of unfortunate, crippled, innocent, hungry children, sub-normal minds, untrained hands—all that can be seen. Yet it exists. It cannot be solved.

TOO FEW WORKERS The average "intake" load, I am informed, is about 141 cases among white families and about 180 among negroes. That means new cases, each of which requires from 10 to 15 hours of investigation. The average "intake" load ought to be about 50 cases. The average district load is well over 200 cases per worker. It ought to be about 75 to 100. Some workers have almost 300 cases. Statistics, however, do not attract public attention.

Perhaps Mrs. G. is not the only one who will be remembered that Mrs. G. is a human being with blood and eyes and a mind which can worry about her sick ones and hungry ones. And especially if it be remembered Mrs. G. may be multiplied 500 times.

Five Hundred Cars Were a Surplus Before the Little People Were Taught to Buy Them

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

The rich little paradise called Cuba is the whole world in miniature. It has everything from a dictator to an unpayable debt, from an armament burden to hungry farmers. Solve Cuba's problem and you can save the world.

Cuba's big crop is sugar cane. When the harvest began last January, the big planters, as usual, needed much extra labor for the cutting and grinding.

Now the Cuban negro, in the present state of the world, is willing to work for 30 cents a day. Given that wage, he can somehow contrive to feed and shelter himself—while the wage continues.

The big planters need cheap labor, so they import boat loads of negroes from Haiti and ship them back home when the season's work is finished.

Knowing how these things work out in other parts of the world, you assume that the heartless planters, paying starvation wages, make enormous profits and live on the fat of the land.

But it isn't true in this case. The planters aren't making big profits or any kind of profits. In fact, much of the cane was left standing in the field because it wasn't worth cutting.

Why isn't it worth cutting? Because the sugar doesn't bring enough to pay the cost of cutting and grinding and processing, even when the cheapest of labor does the work.

Why doesn't the sugar bring a price that is profitable? Because it must compete in the world's markets with other sugar—the sugar produced in Hawaii and the Philippines, the cane sugar produced in our southern states and the beet sugar produced in the west.

In short, there is a surplus of sugar.

Does this mean that the world produces more sugar than it can consume? Alas, no. There are millions in America and Europe and Russia and elsewhere who can't afford sugar, cheap as it is. If all of the world's people could buy all the sugar they desire, there wouldn't be enough to go round.

Surplus doesn't mean a surplus for everybody. It means more than can be consumed by the people who can afford to buy it.

Therefore the problem of a "surplus" can be solved in two ways. The obvious and easier and customary way is to cut production—to produce less and less until there is just enough to supply those who have the money to pay for it. The others can then do without, and who cares?

The other way is to keep on producing as much as possible; rejoice in the earth's bounty; and so arrange the affairs of civilization that all people who desire sugar may be able to buy it.

The second method would get at the root of the problem and solve it in the same and logical way by doubling the number of consumers and transforming the "underprivileged" into cash customers.

But selfish men haven't yet learned that they can best save themselves by saving one another, so we'll keep on trying to do it the hard way until, as usual, the hurt is bad enough to teach us wisdom.

30-CENT MINIMUM TEXTILE PAY URGED

Alabama Governor Asserts Differentials Must Be Considered.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 5.—(AP)—Governor Frank M. Dixon reported today southern governors were "working on the general proposition that so long as differentials operate against us they must be taken into consideration" in fixing minimums under the wage-hour law.

The Alabama executive said southern colleagues were "figuring on being represented" at Atlanta June 26, when Administrator Elmer F. Andrews will hear arguments on a proposal that minimum textile wages be raised from 25 to 32 1-2 cents an hour July 1.

Dixon recently expressed belief operators should be left to run on a 30-cent minimum which automatically becomes effective in October, under the law. He mentioned freight rates and tariffs among "differentials" he said operated against the south.

A majority of the national wage-hour Advisory board has recommended the 32 1-2-cent rate. Its report may be accepted or rejected by Andrews.

VANDENBERG URGES FREE ENTERPRISE

Asserts It Would Take U. S. Out of Depression in Six Months.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 5.—(AP)—United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, asserted today that "if free enterprise, under the American system, were given a legitimately fair chance, we should be out of this depression in six victorious months."

Vandenberg, who recently announced his willingness to accept the Republican nomination for president in 1940, made his declaration in a commencement address at Syracuse University, where he received the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Recovery, Vandenberg said, cannot be accomplished "under restrictive laws which stifle initiative, penalize thrift, discourage aspiration, throttle investment, kill confidence and harness the thwarted activities of citizenship in the straight-jacket of arbitrary government controls."

While urging a "return to the American system of free enterprise, with the rewards that flow from individual effort," Vandenberg declared "it is absurd to say that all the new devices for economic security and social justice shall be scrapped."

"Our task," he said, "is to restore an equilibrium. . . . If we were to neglect the lessons we have learned—namely, that social-mindedness as opposed to socialism, is our inevitable responsibility—we should probably confront another devastating reaction in short order."

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"But that two-handed engine at the door, stands ready to smite once, and smite no more."

Limitations placed upon the smiting effect its efficiency and aim, but how? Limiting occupancy of the White House to one term of six years, as suggested by Senator Vandenberg, might free the incumbent for wholly disinterested and unselfish service, as he believes it would, but on the other hand it might give him an "after us the deluge" attitude. Desire for a second term in office can persuade a man to do things against public interest and to use his position wrongfully to hold his position. But it can also make him more sensitive to the public will. Knowledge that there is to be no second term in office can enable a man to think only of the public good, but it can also tell him to serve himself and his crowd without having to be called to account on some election day to come.

Imagine a six-year single term rule for some such group as the Ohio gang which dominated and betrayed Warren Harding. With no second term to curry favor for, and six long years certain, they would devote themselves so intensively and efficiently to their thieving that not even the Washington Monument might be left.

It's a moot question, in this column's opinion, and one in which the possible value of being subject to a coming vote of approval or disapproval needs to be considered. But we think there is enough in Senator Vandenberg's point to argue against a third term for our presidents, if not against a second. A third consecutive term,

If "the new imperative," as Walter Lippmann calls it, is governmental concern for the economic well-being of the people, then "the new code" that must go with the imperative includes meticulous concern for probity in government and for avoidance not only of the misuse of power but of even the appearance or possibility of misuse. Or of example which might lead to misuse. Some are beginning to believe that the controls which government has had to assume are so great and so permanent that democracy is no longer possible under them. The better belief, we think, is that nothing must be left undone to preserve democracy under them and that, with a new morality in office and public usage, our democratic form can be saved.

NLRB AIDE URGES NINE BE REINSTATED

Rules Moultrie Workers Be Offered Old Jobs, Full Back Pay.

Trial Examiner Thomas S. Wilson, of the National Labor Relations Board, recommended in an intermediate report yesterday that the Riverside Manufacturing Company of Moultrie, Ga., offer to reinstate nine employees to their former jobs and make up any losses in pay.

The report also recommended the company, which manufactures garments, "desist from interfering, restraining or coercing its employees to form, join or assist the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (an affiliate of the CIO), or any other labor organization to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing."

It held the company engaged "in unfair labor practices" by allowing the employees "to be ejected from its plant," and "refusing" to employ them.

Those ordered restored to their jobs were listed as Mary Thelma Hancock, Cora McMillin, Lela Hodges, Eunice Ellis, Maggie Price, Mae Rentz, Irene Richards, Flora Wilson and Meecie Childs.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

A CERTAIN FOX.

Paul Jones invited a group of friends up to Canton the other night for a big dinner and a fox hunt. I was sick over having to miss it, but there was an engagement already made for the night which couldn't be shoved aside. Naturally, I was keen to get some word about the occasion, and John Rudegal, Ches Smith and others were telling me about it all, including the following story which one of the veteran fox hunters from up in the mountains told the crowd at Paul's big party. Here is the story in brief:

In a certain section of the mountains the hunters discovered that every time they went on a fox hunt they would lose one or two of their finest dogs. (Losing a fox hound is a very serious matter). The thing kept up until it was a matter of great concern. They advertised for their dogs, but never a word of response. Finally they quit hunting in that section entirely.

And then one day a man was prowling through the forest, and at the foot of a very high precipice—a hundred or more feet of sheer precipice—he noticed a dog collar, and then another, and another, until he had picked up a half dozen dog collars. He rubbed the name plates a bit and discovered the names of the dogs and then the owners. Hurrying to his friends, they sought to solve the mystery. Finally it dawned on them that their dogs must have fallen over that precipice in swift pursuit of the fox, but what became of the fox?

They resolved to make a test. They put out a pack of hounds, and stationed men in trees at the precipice on a moonlight night to see what might happen. After a certain circle, this red fox came in full speed to the edge of this fearful precipice, halted for a moment, leaped to a ledge several feet below, and like a flash the lead dogs went over the fatal precipice and to their tragic death below. The slower dogs were saved—it was the finest dogs, remember, that had been lost every time they had chased this red fox.

The watchers went quickly down with lanterns and found that the fox had a trail that took him along the sharp cliffs of the mountain side to safety. On the next chase they shot the fox as he neared the precipice, saving the fast dogs and ending the career of a famous red fox who was cunning enough to lead his enemies to death while he looked down upon them from his refuge far above. I don't know what you'll say about it, but I put that down as one of the top notch hunting stories for 1939.

VOCATIONAL FARM TEACHERS TO HEAR FEDERAL EXPERTS

O. E. Baker and M. B. Storer, of Agriculture Body, Outline Program Here En Route to Meet.

Two members of the United States Department of Agriculture from Washington arrived in Atlanta enroute to the 48th conference of teachers and vocational agriculture at Jackson Lake today.

They were O. E. Baker, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Morris B. Storer, of the program study and discussion section, and will aid in establishing a national agricultural program.

Mr. Baker suggested the following for a long time outlook for agriculture:

1. Urban civilization, or culture, with its unprecedented growth in population and wealth and in occupational specialization, will be furthered by the rapid progress in science and invention and exploitation of virgin resources.

2. The era of expansion, exploitation and speculation is merging into an era that seems likely to be characterized by search for economic security and stability. In order to meet this expansion all willing unemployed should be put to work to meet the needs of the agricultural world.

Attending the convention will be members of various Georgia vocational agricultural schools. The main purpose of this conference is to develop an understanding on the part of the teachers of vocational agriculture, educational leaders and others of the present economic situation in Georgia and to trace national policies, economic forces and social development during the past years that have led to the existing situation.

Tech Graduates Urged To Be Tolerant

Abit Nix Tells 375 Seniors To Preserve Democracy at Commencement; Y.F. Freeman Given Medal.

Abit Nix, member of the board of regents of the University System of Georgia, yesterday urged the 375 graduates who received the diplomas at the commencement exercises of Georgia Tech "to yearn for sincerity in thought and conduct when listening to the fanatical expressions of prejudices, passions and hatreds among the sons of men, and when sensing the revolt which is rife in the world against religious and racial groups."

Introduced by President H. L. Brittain, who awarded the diplomas to the graduates in the new auditorium-gymnasium, Mr. Nix asserted himself to be an ambassador of the friends of Georgia Tech, speaking to the graduates who were ready to leave the classroom, the workshop and the laboratory. He urged these new members of the business and professional world to realize the importance of this day—their day.

"You graduates have come from every corner of our commonwealth and many of you have come from places beyond its borders; you have come from various stations and conditions in life; some from wealthy homes and surroundings, some from families of those who have been less fortunate in the accumulation of wealth or position and some have come from the homes of those who have themselves been the beneficiaries of high educational opportunities," he said. "But remember, students, you all have the ability to get out and make good."

"When you go out to assume positions of leadership in a state and in a nation which is at this time not only beset by conflicts in thought and action, but interested in experimentation in governmental, social and economic affairs, keep in mind that you are blazing a new trail just like the pioneers did many years ago," Mr. Nix said.

"The greatest problem that will confront you will be that of preserving the democracy upon which our progress has been based. You young men must aid in stamping out the pernicious doctrines and practices of the foreign nations that attempt to destroy individual liberty and our personal freedom," he concluded.

Following Mr. Nix's address, President Brittain awarded the distinguished service medal to Y. Frank Freeman, with the following inscription engraved on its gold surface: "To honor one who through good deeds has served his alma mater." Freeman is vice president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., and a member of the 1910 graduating class. Mr. Freeman left his business in Hollywood to return once again to his alma mater to receive the honor.

Mr. Freeman entered Georgia Tech from Emory University in January, 1907. He graduated with the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering.

Scholarship honors awarded to the outstanding graduates were as follows:

Phi Kappa Phi senior cup, A. G. Rossow; Tau Beta Pi senior cup, F. T. Waldemire; Briarson Society senior cup, F. T. Waldemire; American Institute of Architects medal, A. C. Hudson; National Association of Cotton Manufacturers medal, W. G. Lee; Cotton Manufacturers Association medal, J. A. Stapleton; Alpha Chi Sigma award, W. C. G. Saeman; Kappa Eta Kappa award, R. C. Cheek; Pi Tau Sigma awards, W. L. Shipman, C. C. Davis; American Institute of Chemical Engineering award, W. C. G. Saeman; American Institute of Engineering student branch award, J. H. Cook, and the fraternity scholarship cup awarded to Sigma Nu fraternity.

The commencement was closed with the presentation of commissions in the military reserve officers' training corps and the naval reserve officers' training corps. As the group sang the "Alma Mater," the graduates slowly filed out of the auditorium.

ATTEMPT TO REVIVE SHOCKED LINEMAN

11,000 Volts Pass Through Macon Worker; Hope All But Vanishes.

MACON, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—George A. Tomlin, 36, lineman for the Georgia Power Company, came in contact with 11,000 volts of electricity as he worked on a power line here this afternoon. After three hours of artificial respiration, doctors early tonight virtually abandoned hope for saving his life.

The doctors, however, said there would be a possibility of Tomlin's recovery up until eight hours after the shock. They planned to continue efforts to revive him as long as there was the slightest hope.

Tomlin, who lives here with his wife and small child, slumped unconscious on his safety belt atop a high pole as he and two other linemen were replacing damaged insulators.

When rain began to fall shortly before 6 p. m. canvas shelters were set up over the unconscious man and rescue workers.

Several hundred bystanders who crowded to the scene were roped off by police.

TRAFFIC ENGINEER IS URGED FOR CITY

Safety Authority F. M. Kreml Recommends Transfer of Malcom.

Employment of a traffic engineer for Atlanta, removal of Captain Jack Malcom as head of the traffic bureau and addition of 24 men to the motorcycle division were recommended yesterday by Lieutenant F. M. Kreml, director of the International Association of Police Chiefs as the means of improving traffic conditions.

Kreml's recommendations followed a recent visit to Atlanta when he surveyed the traffic situation and met with the citizens' traffic safety committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

In recommending the replacement of Malcom, the traffic authority said:

"While Captain Malcom apparently has a great enthusiasm for the traffic control work in which he is engaged, he does not, I am sure, have a thorough understanding of the operating details necessary to successful administration."

Malcom Shocked.
Malcom said he was "shocked and surprised" at Kreml's report, explaining he thought the department had been making a good record in reducing deaths.

"I think Chief Hornsby is more qualified to say who shall be captain than Lieutenant Kreml, and I am going to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the chief and the police committee of city council."

"Although I didn't ask for this job when I got it 10 years ago, I have been trying to do a good job. It seems to me that Kreml is trying to obtain jobs for some of his graduates, but all I have to say is that I'm working for Chief Hornsby and the police committee and not for Kreml."

Kreml said the city should employ a fully trained traffic engineer, adequately staffed and equipped, who should be given as full authority as the ordinances will permit over the installation of all signs, signals and markings and other physical devices for the control of traffic.

Speed Law Skipped.
Atlanta's 25-mile-an-hour speed limit received little praise from Kreml. He expressed the opinion the reduction in deaths from this law was "a sporadic result of a rather drastic move" and would not continue.

In advocating addition of 24 men to the motorcycle division, raising the personnel to 50, Kreml said they should be assigned on a selective enforcement basis. He added that the enforcement index should be maintained at 15—which means there should be 15 traffic convictions for each personal injury accident resulting from hazardous moving violations. Figures in the traffic bureau show that the index is approximately 15 at present.

Two other recommendations called for making the accident investigation squad an integral part of the traffic division and compulsory periodical inspection of all motor vehicles, as is now being done in Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Miami and several other cities.

Mayor Hartsfield declined to comment on the recommendations and turned them over to Chief Hornsby. The chief said he had nothing to say about the suggested removal of Malcom, but that the majority of the recommendations already were in effect.

Councilman J. Allen Couch came to Malcom's defense on the floor of city council yesterday afternoon, when he had read of Kreml's suggestion in a newspaper.

"I do not concur in what this interloper (referring to Kreml) has to say," declared Couch.

Fred Eiseman Jr., who had the highest average in his class, was valedictorian. He is the son of Fred S. Eiseman, of 884 Boulevard, and grandson of the late Jacob Eiseman.

In addition to his other honors, he also won scholarships to both University of Georgia and Georgia Tech, and a wrist watch for the best essay on "Why I'm Proud to Be an American."

LE CRAW STRESSES POSITION OF NEGRO

Race Claimed Important to Southern Democracy.

The place of the negro in southern democracy was stressed last night by J. Walter LeCraw, commander of Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, in an address before a mass meeting of negroes at Shaw Metropolitan Zion church. The meeting was held under the auspices of the American Loyalty League in the interest of educating negroes to the danger presented in the growth of propaganda against the American form of government, and was the first of a series scheduled for Fulton county.

LeCraw stressed the Americanism program of the Legion, which, he said, entailed religious liberty, preserving the home, free

HIGH COURT VOIDS BAN BY HAGUE ON MASS MEETINGS

CIO Appeal for Permission to Gather Upheld; Child Labor Act Ruled Alive After 15 Years.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(P)—Winding up a busy term, the supreme court today struck down a Jersey City ordinance which prevented CIO mass meetings, upheld the administration's milk marketing controls and declared the unratified child labor amendment still alive, although 15 years have passed since congress submitted it to the states.

In its 5-to-2 decision in the Hague-CIO case, the tribunal sustained injunctions against Mayor Hague and other city officials issued by the Federal District Court for New Jersey and the Federal Circuit Court at Philadelphia.

Writing the majority opinion on the ordinance, under which a permit was required to hold meetings in streets and parks, Justice Roberts declared it violated the constitutional right of free assembly.

A Notable Victory. Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, described the decision as "a notable victory" which would "lend new encouragement to labor everywhere."

In two sweeping decisions, the court declared the regulation of LAKE CHARLES, La., June 5. (P)—When the Danish freighter, Kai, received orders to proceed from Progreso, Mexico, to Lake Charles to pick up a cargo of rice for Cuba, her master, Captain C. Friis, did the logical thing.

Lake Charles is on the Calcasieu river and so Captain Friis headed for the mouth of the river. He was, however, years ahead of time. The water was over the bar at the mouth of the river, has a depth of five feet at low tide. The Kai, however, drawing 11 feet six inches, caught the bar at full tide and passed over and was steaming slowly toward the town of Cameron when an amazed coast guard cutter flagged Captain Friis down and told him it couldn't be done. After digging the direct channel is finished, they said yes. But now, no.

Two Are Honored. Two honorary degrees, a doctor of divinity to Bishop William T. Watkins and a doctor of laws to Dr. James Ross McCain, president of Emory University, were conferred by the Emory University board of trustees, who also presented diplomas to the graduating class.

Strickland told the seniors that every sign points away from amassing of great individual wealth in the future and that they should endeavor to render real service, learn to work, and help to "restore old-fashioned conceptions of some fundamentals, chief among them debt, waste, work and citizenship."

"You must learn to work if you would be happy," the bank president asserted. "This nation was not built by a five-day week or an eight-hour day, and I hazard the opinion that we will not maintain our present place in world competition without many persons toiling long hours, not for selfish ends but that their contribution to society and the nation will aid in mending our impaired economy and solving our difficult social problems."

Drawing a contrast between the words of his own commencement speaker 25 years ago and the political and economic outlook today, Strickland declared: "I must confess that my generation leaves you a Pandora's box of evil problems. We bequeath you a debt—a public debt that has grown from a few billion dollars in 1914 to more than 60 billions today, of which your individual share is approximately $500."

"We bequeath you a government grown from a small establishment performing the normal functions of government among a free people to a bureaucratic system employing more than 4,000,000 and delving into every phase of our national activity."

"We leave you strange economic theories, unknown to our forebears. Among them: The less we produce the more we have; the less we work the more we earn; the more we spend the more we save."

"Further, we bequeath to youth today tarnished citizenship, atrophied by disuse, a sovereignty abdicated. Instead of leaving to youth the savings of a nation rich beyond Mideas' dream, we leave eroded soil, denuded forests, and waste on every hand."

"Worst of all these legacies which youth today will inherit are class consciousness and prejudice, a withered self-reliance, and a disrespect for the promises men live by."

Holds Out Hope. The banker looked darkly on the developments in other nations within the past generation but he held forth the hope that the sturdy qualities that built America will save it from dictatorship.

"In other nations, young generations have rebelled at such an inheritance as comes to you. Not in ancient history, but in your day and mine has this happened. In rebelling, they have traded liberty, freedom and opportunity for dictatorship," he said.

"These people lacked the vital quality which made America. There is no hardy pioneer background, no land of opportunity, no inherited resourcefulness, no inborn love of freedom."

"The very presence of these qualities in American youth gives promise that thousands will go out this week and begin the repair of our political and economic mistakes."

Nine members of the graduating classes were awarded their degrees with honors in their fields of specialization. They were: Paul Hartsfield, Moultrie, and Banker Says Graduates Must Save U. S.

Upon today's generation of college graduates rests the responsibility of saving America, Robert Strickland, president of the Trust Company of Georgia, told the 338 members of the graduating class of Emory University yesterday morning as he painted a pessimistic picture of the inheritance of American youth.

He cited the national debt of $60,000,000,000—federal, state and municipal, which must be shouldered by the youth of today.

A member of the 1914 Emory graduating class, the banker said his generation is bequeathing debt, eroded land, waste and a "distorted economy" to its successors.

His address featured the closing exercises of commencement held at Glenn Memorial hall.

Since his arrest at Coroner Donehoo's order early Sunday morning.

Anne said that when she returned late Saturday afternoon from swimming in the Piedmont park pool she found her mother asleep on a couch in the living room and McConnell asleep in her father's bed with a bottle of whiskey in his pocket.

On a previous occasion, about a month before, the father had ejected McConnell from the house and had locked the front door, the children said. That time, it was testified, McConnell persisted in efforts to re-enter and rang the bell several times before finally going away. McConnell attended the hearing but was not questioned.

Anne said that Saturday, after finding her mother and McConnell, she went out for their cook, Ocie Goodwin, to tell her to prepare dinner. When she returned her father was at home, she said, and McConnell was gone.

"Mother was lying on the floor and daddy kicked her," testified the child. "She tried to get up and he kicked her again."

Helen was at home, too, by this time, as was the brother, Alex, 12. The father told the children to go to bed, it was testified, but they came downstairs again somewhat later. Liddell, Anne said, was standing over her mother with an

GIRL PASSES EXAM THOUGH SUFFERING APPENDIX ATTACK

It took more than a mere appendicitis attack to keep 12-year-old Louise Trotti Hudson from taking her final examination at Claremont school—and passing it, friends revealed yesterday.

Louise, daughter of Mrs. W. Guy Hudson of 401 Oakland street, Decatur, was sick Friday morning but more or less obeyed her mother by going to school anyway.

Once there, she was so exhausted she had to lie down on a couch while she took the exam. An hour later she was on the operating table. Saturday, with the appendix safely out, she learned that she had passed with flying colors, and yesterday she was "just doing fine."

JOHNSTON TALKS TO COTTON OIL MEN

Planter Advocates Program of Intelligent Advertising.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 5.—(P)—A program of intelligent advertising to create new demands for cotton, research to create new uses, and the correction of discriminatory legislation were urged today by Oscar Johnston, of Scott, Miss., president of the National Cotton Council, at the Georgia Cotton Seed Crushers Association convention at Savannah Beach.

Johnston, manager of one of the world's largest cotton plantations and a former director of the United States Cotton Pool and vice president of the Community Credit Corporation, gave the background of the present cotton problem.

At All-Time Low. Johnston pointed out that in the last 10 years the world price of American cotton, based on the gold dollar, has sunk from approximately 18 cents a pound to its present all-time low of about 5 cents.

A lackadaisical attitude on the part of cotton men with no effort toward sale or use of cotton products has been an open invitation to competition, the speaker said.

H. E. McMath, of Americus, president of the association, and Dr. H. P. Stuckey, director of the Georgia Experiment Station, were also on the speaking program.

Stuckey spoke on "Peanuts for Oil Production."

Stuckey pointed out that peanuts extended more generally into the lower Piedmont section of Georgia would offer the farmer and the oil man a crop with which to supplement cotton and capture a part of the market for imported oils, and contribute to the conservation of the soil, provided the peanut meal and hay were fed to livestock on the farm.

In the report of the board of directors it was emphasized that "it is not cotton per se that has caused our agricultural woes, but the abuses that have been imposed on it by charging it with the cost of producing other crops and the general maintenance of the farm."

When cotton is treated as a cash crop to be produced in connection with a "home living" in the form of wheat, corn, oats, legumes, livestock, hogs, poultry, milk and butter, a vegetable garden, etc., we shall unquestionably see the dawn of a brighter day in the south and the happiest and most prosperous people under God's blue heaven...

East Point city council last night refused to grant the Georgia Growers' Distilling Company a permit to erect a distilling plant in the business section of the community. The company had proposed to erect a plant on the site formerly occupied by the old Upchurch Packing Company. It was reported feeling was strong among citizens of East Point against establishment of the distillery.

Other matters before council were of a routine nature.

electric iron. Helen, it was testified, cried: "Stop, daddy, stop!"

Tells of Drinking. They said Liddell then take his wife into the bedroom and put her up on the bed, the children said. More than once he repeated, "Bleed some more," Anne testified. Alex, less communicative, said that his parents had been drinking but that he didn't know what had happened.

Dr. Frank K. Boland, whom Liddell summoned by telephone Saturday night; Detectives E. I. Hildebrand and C. L. Taylor; the maid, Ocie, and two close friends, Miss Sarah Jane Morgan, a second cousin, and Julian Oglesby, were among witnesses.

It was indicated in testimony that Mrs. Liddell possibly had been beaten by a house slipper with a heavy wooden heel. Dr. J. C. Blalock, county physician, testified that Mrs. Liddell's fatal injuries could only have been caused by blows and not by a fall.

Liddell, 42, was graduated from Tech in 1921. He played on the baseball team. He is treasurer of the alumni association.

Prominent in Augusta. Mrs. Liddell's father, the late Anthony Bindewald, was connected with the pre-prohibition Augusta Brewing Company. The family had been prominent in Augusta Catholic circles before moving to Atlanta in 1921.

Also surviving Mrs. Liddell, the former Miss Rose Bindewald, of Atlanta, and previously of Augusta, are her mother, Mrs. Anthony Bindewald, of Atlanta; two brothers, Andrew Bindewald, of Greenville, S. C., and Joseph Bindewald, of Lyman, S. C.; two sisters, Miss Loretta Bindewald, of Atlanta, and Sister Evangelista, of the Order of Sister Loretta.

Funeral services for Mrs. Liddell will be conducted at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at Sacred Heart church. The Rev. Father H. T. Haas will officiate and burial will be in West View cemetery.

ARNALL ADVOCATES SELF-GOVERNMENT

Tells Exchange Club It's the Best Safeguard Against Iama.

Ellis Arnall, Georgia's attorney general, yesterday advocated self-government as "the best safeguard against subversive forces that are seeking to undermine our government."

The address presented to the members of the state convention of the Georgia Exchange Clubs at the Biltmore hotel marked the second day of the three-day affair.

"Who has ever heard of Communism, Nazism, or any other un-American theory coming out of a small town or county? We really need to turn our thoughts to the decentralization of government. A full, free and frequent expression of the people on important issues is vital to our continued well-being. The local unit is the best arena for this expression," he declared.

When questioned about Georgia's agricultural problem, Arnall urged the convention to consider finding "some way to enable the farmer to make a decent living."

"I do not have the solution," he said, "but I do know that the first and greatest economic problem that we have in Georgia and in the nation today is how to make agriculture prosperous." The best minds in our state and in the nation should be put to work on this problem in an effort to solve it—not theoretically, but on a practical, workable basis.

At the conclusion of Mr. Arnall's talk the state delegates adjourned the meeting and went to the Lakemoor Club. Elections are to be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the Biltmore hotel.

RUSSO-JAPANESE CLASH REPORTED

Paper Claims 1 Nipponese, Several of Enemy Dead in Manchoukuo.

TOKYO, June 6.—(Tuesday)—(P)—Soviet Russians and Japanese fought a three-hour artillery battle late Monday near Changkufeng in the Manchoukuo-Siberian-Korean border area, the newspaper Asahi reported today in a dispatch from Hunchun.

Near the end of the battle, the newspaper's correspondent reported, Russian infantry charged Japanese positions, but was forced to retreat and leave the bodies of two soldiers. Other dead were carried away. One Japanese was killed.

The newspaper said the Russians now were building concrete trenches to hold their positions.

Hunchun is just over the border in Manchoukuo from Korea. It was from that point that many of the engagements of the "vest pocket war" of Changkufeng last July 11-August 11 were reported.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi reported fighting in the vicinity took place Saturday.

The spot is in eastern Manchoukuo, some 1,600 miles from Lake Bor on the Mongolian frontier where various infantry, cavalry, tank and airplane battles have been reported since May 7.

The Russian geographer Shokalsky is honored by having named after him an island, a strait, two glaciers, a peak and several other geographic features.

MY LOVE IS WAITING

A Remark Dorian Makes Leads Bart to Think She Is Seeking a Rich Husband

By Margaret Gorman Nichols
INSTALLMENT V.

Bart and Dorian danced a great deal that evening and after midnight went out on deck and walked. The ship was pitching a little and he said, "It will be smooth on the Mediterranean and the nights there are more beautiful than anything you have ever dreamed of. Is that why you came, Dorian?"

She stopped and stayed her blowing hair with her hand. But Miles declined and went away, calling himself a fool for caring so much; telling himself that there would be no more table tennis and no more swimming for them together; that he would keep her at a safe distance from now on, and wishing, wishing that he could get very drunk.

"I came chiefly because my mother wanted me to come. Of course I've always wanted to see the places we're going to see..." He frowned. "Your mother wanted..."

She nodded. "My mother is more ambitious for me than I am for myself."

"Oh, I see. But don't be harsh with her. There are a great many girls like you, Dorian, in small towns. It's a pity. Flowers choked by weeds, passed unseen, unappreciated. You're honest. Not many girls would admit that they were looking for a rich husband."

"But I'm not," Dorian said. "I don't care about money other than enough to be modestly comfortable. It hasn't anything to do with happiness. I haven't met many rich people but the ones I have met aren't happy. They always want more than they have."

"You're a serious child." She looked out to the sea. "I want to understand myself and that's more difficult than trying to understand other people. I'd like not to make any bad mistakes and not to hurt any one."

"Or be hurt." "I'd rather be hurt than hurt some one else."

Taking her cool hand, he put it to his lips. "You're very sweet and quite incredible, and you probably think you're rather an ordinary person. But it's rare to find beauty and character and intelligence in one small girl."

She looked up at him, her dark eyes puzzled. "I've never met any one like you before, Bart."

"And that's because you've known only the small town boys you went to school with. There are a great many men like me."

And how pathetically gauche and awkward the others seem by comparison with you, she thought. You have poise and you never say any of the wrong things.

Her seriousness amused him. Chuckling, he said, "You're beginning to look tired."

"I am. I've walked miles today. I think..."

"I'll see you to your cabin." The lights were dim in the long narrow corridor. At her door she paused, took her key, and opened it. And looked up at him, knowing instantly that their first good night would be more than a few murmured words.

Bart said, "Darling," and his arms went around her. And for her no kiss had ever been like this, Bart's first kiss. He said, "Tomorrow morning," and the next moment she was inside the little cabin.

on deck again feeling more stirred than he had felt in a long time. He thought that if she did not lose her sense of humor and make a nuisance of herself she would be a delightful cruise companion, but he determined not to permit himself to feel more for her than he wished to feel. And when the towers of Manhattan were again in sight, he would say a very final goodbye.

"Hello, Bart."

Turning, he saw Fern sitting in a deck chair. Coming closer, he saw that though 10 years old given maturity and an added dignity to her face, she was no less lovely than the Fern of 19.

"Fern... or rather Mrs. Marshall..."

She extended her hand and smiled. "Don't let's be formal. How are you? It's been a long time since..." Since that night we said goodbye in my father's old house in Roland Park...

"Ten years, to be exact. I saw you alone today. Isn't your husband..." For ten years he had hated James Marshall.

Quickly she lowered her lashes. "No, Jim isn't with me. But my son is. Stephen is six years old and this is his first trip. He's very excited about ship life, so excited in fact that he didn't want to go to bed. I'm traveling tourist because of him. I thought we could be well, less formal."

Bart said, looking at her steadily. "But I shouldn't imagine that a boy of six would get much from a trip like this."

She hesitated. "He—he hasn't been very well lately and the doctor thought a sea voyage would be good for him. He begins school in the autumn." She smiled as if it were an effort. "Oh, but that's enough about me and my family. Won't you sit down and tell me about yourself."

He sat in an adjoining deck chair, lighted a cigarette, and said, "I'm afraid it would bore you. My life has been chiefly business and travel."

She said quietly, "But if I remember correctly that is precisely the kind of life you wanted."

He thought, "I wanted you. If I had had you, I probably would never have left Baltimore. Perhaps I'd been a dismal failure in business. But I'd have had the women I wanted."

Fern asked, "And have you been successful, Bart?"

He nodded. "Yes, quite." "You've been very fortunate." He said almost sharply, "I've worked hard." Then he asked, "Are you still living in Baltimore?"

"I haven't been there since I left ten years ago except on short business trips." Because Baltimore meant the places where they had been happy together.

"Yes," Fern said. "We have a house in the valley. More room for Stephen, when he can learn to ride and have dogs." Her eyes were thoughtful. Then, drawing her luxurious mink coat around her, she stood up. "It's very late and if Stephen awakens and finds me gone, he may be frightened. It's nice to see you again, Bart. I suppose we'll be seeing each other again. We can't very well help it, can we?"

She left him hurriedly because she did not want him to see that she was beginning to cry.

Why hadn't she told him the truth? Why hadn't she told him that Jim, broken in mind and body and spirit after the loss of his money and the failure of his business, had died in a sanitarium two months ago? Why hadn't she told him that she was taking it because her friends had insisted on a change for her before she took a job to support Stephen and herself? She had not told him because she could not bear his pity.

No doubt he still hated her; he had every right to despise her. But he did not know that she had never loved him, that she married him because her marriage to him was the brilliant match her parents had wished and hoped for her, and that scarcely a day had passed during those 10 years of silence between her and Bart that she had not thought of him—because she had loved him when she was 19 and he 21 and she had never ceased to love him. Nothing had changed her feelings toward Bart, though she had been a good wife to Jim who had been a good husband to her.

She would never tell Bart. And then it occurred to her that perhaps she should tell him so that he could have the triumph he deserved, the last laugh. She had sent him away because he was poor and now she was poor and he was successful. But quickly she changed her mind, fearful that he would offer assistance, knowing that she could not accept assistance nor bear his pity. She had borne enough already—and so much was yet to be borne when she returned. A woman of 29, without training who must earn money to support herself and her son and educated her son. No. Better to let Bart think that Jim waited for her in the large house in the valley and that she would continue to wear mink coats all her life. She would see a little of Bart as possible. But the coincidence of their being on the same ship she thought, going inside and walking down the corridor to her cabin. In vain, in vain...

It had come too late, much too late.

Stephen was sleeping soundly, his cheeks as red as his mouth, his dark hair moist. Fern bent down and kissed his forehead and looked at him tenderly, the tears starting in her eyes again. My darling...

It wouldn't be with him as she and Jim had thought it would be—a healthy life in the picturesque valley of Maryland with horses and dogs, the finest schools, an unquestionable social position. Now he would grow up in a small New York apartment (she had the half promise of a job in New York) and he would go to a public school and probably work his way through a university.

She pulled up her dark head quickly and smiled at herself. How silly of her to think of Bart as still unmarried. No doubt he was married to the lovely girl with whom he had been dancing all evening.

Dorian put on a heavy tweed coat and came up on deck again, knowing that sleep was impossible for her.

Love is the loneliest thing in the world, she thought, walking slowly around the dark, deserted deck. Usually you take problems too difficult for you to people who know more than you. But alone you must accept or deny love in your own heart. What had Bart been thinking when he left her? The question tormented her. Was she in love with him? She felt she could not wait until tomorrow to see him again. Fears for herself but a great tenderness for him mingled. She began to walk again...

Some distance away she saw the silhouette of a slim woman. Some one else who couldn't sleep, she wondered. Then the silhouette moved, threw off her wrap and began to climb the rail...

Dorian couldn't move. But she found her voice and shouted, "Don't! Wait!" and as her tight muscles relaxed, she ran and pulled the woman back...

SANITARIUM PLANS DISCHARGE OF 21 COUNTY PATIENTS

Action Will Be Taken If Fulton Commissioners Fail To Provide Funds Needed at Battle Hill.

If Fulton county commissioners fail to make satisfactory financial arrangements for the hospitalization of 41 county patients now at Battle Hill sanitarium, 21 of them will be discharged as soon as practicable, Councilman Frank Wilson, chairman of council's hospital committee, said yesterday.

Wilson also said that if County Commissioner G. H. Halley or the commission wants a conference, he and his committee will be willing to meet, but that in the absence of an "understanding the discharge of patients will be begun immediately."

Halley last week asked Mayor Harfield to arrange a conference with the hospital committee, but Wilson yesterday afternoon said he knew nothing about it.

County Must Aid.
"Fulton county last year paid $2,566 for the operation of Battle Hill," Wilson said, "and that figure was $21,839 short of the actual cost of hospitalizing county patients. Since 1936, the Atlanta government has expended more than $40,000 above amounts the county has paid to the institution for county patients."

"The city government cannot continue to do that. Several years ago, the county agreed it would pay its pro-rata share of the cost for patients at the hospital, but it has fallen far short of this, and the time has come when the city can carry the burden no further. I agree it would be a shame to discharge county patients from Battle Hill and I think the responsibility should be placed where it belongs—on the county."

41 County Patients.
"We now have 41 county patients at Battle Hill. Just figure for yourself what the county should pay to the institution based on the $1.58 a day per patient which is required for them. That is a low figure in comparison with other institutions and this is due to the efficiency of Dr. Joe H. Bradfield, superintendent, and his aides. Fulton county has provided only $12,200 for Battle Hill in its tentative budget, but has paid none of that."

Halley could not be reached last night for a statement regarding what action the county will take, but it was anticipated that the matter will be taken to the regular meeting of the commission tomorrow afternoon.

HOUSE DEFEATS BILL FOR F. D. R. LIBRARY

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP)—Almost solid Republican opposition blocked house approval today of a senate bill providing for establishment of a library at Hyde Park, N. Y., to house papers and documents President Roosevelt has offered to turn over to the government.

The action came on a roll call vote of 229 to 139, less than the two-thirds affirmative vote required under the parliamentary procedure adopted for approval of the measure.

Andrews Regrets South's Governors Refused Aid in Wage-Hour Parley

Offer To Attend Memphis Conference Ignored; Administrator Believes Appeal for Congress Help Could Have Been Avoided.

In a letter made public yesterday by Governor Rivers, Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews expressed "regret" that the southern governors at their recent Memphis conference had not accepted his offer to attend their session and explain the wage-hour law administration, rather than asking congress to make an investigation of that governmental division.

He said he had informed L. W. (Chip) Robert, executive secretary of the conference, of his readiness to meet with the governors.

"I especially regret the fact my invitation was not accepted," he wrote, "because I believe that had I been there to give you the facts, you and your four colleagues would have found it unnecessary to ask congress to conduct a public investigation of the wage and hour division. I could have given you, for example, complete information about the personnel and policies of the division without any necessity for an investigation, and if you had found my presentation inadequate or believed it incorrect, you might then with more propriety have asked an investigation by congress."

Neither the personnel nor the policies of the division were criticized until a majority of the textile industry committee agreed to recommend a 32 1-2 cent minimum wage. For that reason, I am compelled to believe that the criticism is based upon the recommendation of that committee or in anticipation of my approval of that committee's recommendation."

Citing that congress had set up procedure for improving wage standards, Andrews reminded the governors the textile committee had been appointed in accordance with the act and added: "Congress has decreed that I cannot change that recommendation to grant differentials or for any other purpose. I can only accept or reject it. If I accept it, my action is of course subject to review by the courts."

"Because congress set up such a carefully guarded procedure, and that procedure is open (in hearings) to you and our colleagues, I regret that you considered it necessary at this time to demand that congress conduct an investigation."

Planned Representation.
Yesterday in Montgomery, Ala., Governor Dixon said southern governors were "figuring on being represented" at the wage-hour hearing before Administrator Andrews in Atlanta, June 26.

Southern governors will appear, Dixon said, "in an effort to secure compliance with that part of the law which says handicaps and other conditions shall be taken into consideration under the wage-hour law in establishment of differentials."

That section of the law (providing for regional differentials) appears to have been ignored to date. The law requires the administrator to establish them for any particular industry.

"We are working on the general proposition that so long as differentials (such as freight rates) operate against us they must be taken into consideration. Any national board that controls industry always has ruled sectionally against us. Actions of the tariff commission and actions of the Interstate Commerce Commission prove it."

The Alabama executive said he had been "in touch with several other southern governors regarding the presentation of facts" at the Atlanta hearing.

Among those not of the elect a great debate continued. Weeks ago it made itself apparent. One side to this dispute has taken the base viewpoint: "The King and Queen are coming? All right. So what? I'm going to play golf." Adherents of the opposite point of view were scheming little ways to get one glimpse of the King and Queen, even from between the brawny

PAY-HOUR REVISION STUDY IS REFUSED

House Vote Upsets New Deal Plans After Five Farm Groups Object.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP)—Upsetting administration plans, the house refused today even to consider a series of wage-hour amendments under procedure which called for a strict limitation of debate.

The action came on a teller vote of 110 to 167 against a routine parliamentary move which would have led to 40 minutes of debate and then a direct vote on the revisions themselves.

The amendments were designed, among other things, to redefine farm exemptions under the law, and it was on this point that most objections were heard.

Five farm organizations had expressed dissatisfaction with the proposed changes, contending they would rather have the law as now written. A month ago the house labor committee approved a set of changes, then Chairman Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, withdrew the entire bill because of farm opposition.

Only last Thursday the committee rewrote them again and had expected little opposition this time.

The farm organizations, however, renewed their objections.

shoulders of two Washington policemen.

Call Out Firemen.
And, the policemen will be out in force wherever their majesties go. Their numbers, in fact, will be reinforced by the addition of 425 firemen, who have special orders as to pressing their uniforms, shining their shoes and rubbing their insignia to a brilliant polish.

Plans are that as the royal couple motor slowly from the station to the White House they will pass between two unbroken files of soldiers, sailors and marines. Steel cables along the curbing will restrain the spectators jamming the sidewalks. In a cleared space between the service men and the sidewalks will be the police, committing the least mistake of facing the crowds and presenting their backs to the royal procession.

And, here will be dozens of plainclothesmen, both of the police force and the secret service circulating among the throng. The storekeepers don't know it, but the secret service has bought some of their window seats.

AGNES SCOTT GIRLS HOLD CLASS DAY

Traditional Daisy Chain Placed as Students, Friends Celebrate.

Another daisy chain lay in the traditional figure "S" on the campus of Agnes Scott, late yesterday, as senior class exercises for 1939 reached a climax.

The class day, augmented by the college's celebration of its 50th anniversary, was held in the May Day dell, and was attended by several hundred students, alumnae, and families of the seniors.

Mocking future activities of the graduates, foreseeing events of 1950, and presenting history of the past four years completed the program which got under way after the appearance of the seniors in caps and gowns, attended by their sophomore "sisters" in white.

The procession was headed by Miss Cary Wheeler, of LaFayette, Ala., president of the senior class, Miss Frances Berg, of Washington, D. C., member of the sophomore class, and Little Sarah Christian, mascot of the graduating class.

Miss Wheeler gave the address of welcome. History of the class "which began four years ago at 170, ended in 1939, with only 90 alive," was given by Miss Douglas Lyle.

In reading the last will, Miss Mary Wells McNeil, of Florence, S. C., willed everything from evening slippers to the freshmen to the ability of some seniors to "get their man" to the Decatur police force. A telephone in every room, and hockey games with Georgia Tech were included in the prophecy given by Miss Mary Frances Guthrie, of Louisville, Ky. Miss Cora Kay Hutchins closed the program in an appropriate manner, giving the class poem.

Gifts were presented Miss Charlotte Hunter, and R. B. Holt, faculty advisors, from the graduates by Miss Wheeler, who also gave the young mascot her first graduating present.

Overalled King 'Drops' 2,800 Feet Into World's Largest Nickel Mine

He and Queen Spend Two Hours, An Hour Longer Than Scheduled, in Glimmering Sub-Surface Caverns and—Converse With Miners.

SUDBURY, Ont., June 3.—(AP)—Down 2,800 feet below the earth's surface, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth explored the workings of the world's largest nickel mine.

The royal visitors arrived late in the day originally to spend an hour, but extended their stay to two hours in order to descend into the shaft of the International Nickel Company's Frodo mine.

In safety helmets and mining clothes, the King and Queen descended to the spick and span exhibition working level of the famous mine.

The Queen and her ladies-in-waiting wore light raincoats, rubbers and gloves. The King and the men of the party wore overalls.

Through Solid Rock.
The King and Queen, accompanied by a dozen members of their entourage and mine company officials, walked 50 yards across the mine yard from the change house to the shaft.

They entered one of the 60-passenger cages and at a bell signal the hoistman dropped them through solid rock at a speed of 1,500 feet a minute.

At the special level, whitewashed and electrically lighted, they stopped. Few workmen were in evidence because the 2,500 miners were on a holiday to see the royal procession.

A skeleton crew summoned hastily was at work and the royal party clambered into a special car which a battery locomotive drew along the main cross-cut to the ore body.

At cross-cut No. 22 they left the mine car, walked to the face of the ore body and for several minutes watched two miners operate roaring drills into the gleaming surface which yields 11 different metals.

Talk With Miners.
Later the King and Queen talked to the miners.

The royal train reached here after a 24-hour run through the lake-dotted northwest sector of Ontario. Here they found 100,000 men and women gathered from all corners of the mining country.

Two of the busiest days of their tour lay ahead of them before they enter the United States at Niagara Falls Wednesday night for a four-day visit.

"There can be no real prosperity in a nation made up of a handful of multi-millionaires, with the great mass of the people so near starvation that their every day is a day of anxiety."

TEN U.S. PLAYERS TO SEEK HONORS AT WIMBLEDON

Riggs, Alice Marble Head Country's List; Moody Waives Competition.

LONDON, June 5.—(AP)—The United States will challenge for the all-English tennis titles at Wimbledon with a team of ten players, headed by Bobby Riggs, the country's top ranking amateur from Chicago, and Alice Marble, San Francisco's national champion.

Entries for the June 26-July 8 championships closed today with between 350 and 400 players from virtually every nation seeking the singles titles won last year by America's Don Budge and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody. Budge has turned pro and Mrs. Moody, in New York, said she did not feel her game was in good enough shape to warrant playing at Wimbledon.

Riggs, playing on foreign soil for the first time and England's H. W. (Bunny) Austin are favorites. Austin, never a winner but runner-up to Budge last year and Ellsworth Vines in 1932, is in the United States on a Moral Re-Armament tour, but plans to return home in time to practice.

Also entered from the United States are Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., who never has played at Wimbledon; Don McNeill, Oklahoma City; Charles Harris, Palm Beach; Owen Anderson, Los Angeles; Bill Robertson, wealthy Californian; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabry, Brookline, Mass.; Helen Jacobs, Oakland, Cal.; and Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, Cal.

Riggs will team in doubles with Cooke, Harris with McNeill, and Anderson with Robertson. Mrs. Fabry and Mrs. Marble also will play together. But Miss Jacobs, 1936 champion, and Miss Wheeler will limit their competition to singles.

With no Budge, the men's competition figures to be the most open in years. Though Riggs and Austin are favored, Germany's combination of Henkel and Roderich Menzel, the Yugoslavians of Perenc Puncer, Demeter Mitic and Joseph Pallada are highly regarded, with the Chinese, Ko Sin Kie and W. C. Choy, as possible dark horses.

Moody Won't Defend Wimbledon Crown.

NEW YORK, June 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Mills Moody said today she had decided not to defend the women's tennis championship at Wimbledon this year because she felt she was not at the top of her game.

"I was in New York most of the winter and consequently missed outdoor play," she said. "I played indoors but that is different, and although my game has picked up since I have been able to practice on outdoor courts, I do not feel it is up to standard. Besides, I have been so busy on a book, a mystery story, I have not had so much time for tennis."

Mrs. Moody has won the Wimbledon title eight times.

Phils Release Klein; Bucs May Sign Him
PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—(AP)—The Phillies' high command today told outfielder Chuck Klein: voted most valuable player in the National league seven years ago, that he'd better look for another job.

Manager Doc Prothro decided he can't carry six outfielders. Klein hasn't been producing hit in the pinches and his fielding has fallen off.

Because he has been in the major leagues more than ten years, he can deal with any club. His liveliest negotiations have been with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

At an age when most men are looking around for a nice, quiet desk job and an easy chair of evenings, Ki Ki Cuyler is a symbol of that old saying, "h—l on wheels," as manager of the Chattanooga Lookouts.

In a couple of months, Cuyler will be 40 years old. And yet he doesn't look a day over 30 on the ball field. I suspect that veteran Southern league fans don't see a great deal of difference between the Cuyler of today and the Cuyler of 16 years ago, except, perhaps, in the matter of speed on the base paths.

Sixteen years ago, or when Cuyler was 23, he played between Lance Richbourg and Bevo LeBourveau at Nashville. And that outfield is still considered the top outfield in the history of Southern league baseball.

Maybe, as Cuyler says, the only difference he feels today is in his reflexes—"I don't get that quick jump on fly balls." Cuyler declares he doesn't feel much slower and believes his eyes are just as keen. He doesn't have to point out that he can hit a ball just as far, because he does.

Cuyler has accomplished what no other player ever has done in baseball. That is, manage a club and play center field almost every day at the age of 40. And, besides, he has kept the Lookouts up there as contenders all the way. (Cuyler rested last night.)

Reputed to be one of the wealthiest players in baseball due to wise investments, Cuyler doesn't have to play or manage. He could retire to that easy chair. But he has ambitions to manage a big league club.

The job he is doing with the Lookouts certainly entitles him to some consideration. There is no reason to think the Engel entry won't be in the race all the way, and a large part of the credit certainly is due to the leadership and ability of Cuyler.

Cuyler believes that he has been able to remain active so long because "I never smoked, touched liquor and never had more than two beers on any one day in my life."

There probably aren't more than two Lookouts who can out-run him today.

GREAT BASE RUNNER.

Cuyler undoubtedly is the greatest base runner since Ty Cobb. There isn't a player in the majors now who stole as many bases as he did.

And his base-running ability doubtless is reflected in the way in which the Lookouts scamper around the paths. No two ways about it, he is a remarkable athlete and a canny manager.

At the age when most athletes' legs long since have gone back on them, Cuyler feels just as fast as ever. But he doesn't take the chances he used to take. That's the only difference. He has to protect himself.

Cuyler departed the big leagues with a lifetime batting average of .320. He played in three World Series and would have participated in a fourth except for a run-in he had with Donie Bush. Pirate fans wanted him to play, but Bush turned a deaf ear to their pleas in that series of 1927. Later he was traded to the Cubs.

As a Dodger last year, Cuyler had chances to manage Syracuse and Montreal, but the Brooklyn outfit demanded an outfielder in the deal and his changes were blocked. There was talk, too, about him succeeding Burleigh Grimes at Brooklyn, but another talked his way into the job.

And so at the minor league meeting in New Orleans, Cuyler ran across Jimmy Hamilton, who was his manager at Nashville in 1923.

They passed the time of day, asked about each other's health, and what about the future? Cuyler expressed hope he could land a manager's job. Hamilton suggested Chattanooga. And after 20 minutes of conversation with Joe Engel, Cuyler had a job.

Did he pick out a tough spot to launch his career as a manager? Well, the last five starting managers at Chattanooga have failed to finish out the season.

DISCOVERED BY SOUTHERN UMPIRE.

It so happens that Cuyler was discovered and persuaded to go into professional baseball by a Southern league umpire, Bob Kober. Cuyler was working at the time at an automobile factory in Flint, Mich. And the year was 1920.

He played with Bay City and was sold to the Pirates. In 1921 he played under Jimmy Hamilton at Charleston and the following year was under Hamilton at Nashville. He played his first big league baseball with the Pirates.

When Cuyler opened in center field for Chattanooga on opening day in Ponce de Leon, it was his first minor league game since 1923. And so he's back again—with a front-running ball club.

And Paul Richards, normally a .300 hitter, has been retarded by injuries. . . . Joe Engel says there is no need to break up the Crackers. . . . Chattanooga will be glad to do the job. . . . Clark Griffith has told Cecil Travis, Riverdale boy, to pay no heed to the fans' boos and play the baseball of which he is capable. . . . Johnny Hill, who had no right to get them, used to worry about boos at Ponce de Leon. . . . Then he learned how to turn a deaf ear and his play improved considerably. . . . Lad fan writes in and declares the encouragement Russ Peters has been given is partly responsible for making him "the finest shortstop in the Southern league." . . . When the last catcher was hurt recently, the club president of Charlotte (Piedmont league) donned mask and chest protector. . . . He is Calvin Griffith, who once managed the Lookouts for a short time. . . . He's the adopted son of Clark Griffith, Washington owner. . . . Any day now look for Earl Mann to take his turn on the mound. . . . He used to pitch for Oglethorpe. . . . The Smokies must be serious about this pennant race. . . . When it was hinted the club lacked pitchers, Colonel Bob Allen obtained John Hubbell, Kola Sharpe, Lin Watkins and Frank Lamanski. . . . The Smokies have hit almost as many home runs as the Crackers have stolen bases. . . . Anybody who doesn't like a close race is welcome to become an American league or Johnstown fan.

STATE AMATEUR GOLF TOURNEY MAY SET MARK

Removal of Limitations Has Raised Annual Entry Among Dubs.

By ROY WHITE.

With all restrictions as to the limit removed, the 1939 Georgia state amateur golf tournament June 20-24 at Sea Island Beach, looms as one of the greatest in history.

Several years ago the directors of the Georgia Amateur Golf Association voted to raise the limit of five divisions of 32 each to as many divisions and flights as necessary to take care of every entry.

The move proved a popular one, for already reservations at the popular summer resort are rapidly being filled, with only a few choice places left to be taken. Near-by St. Simons also is having its share of patrons for the week.

In supporting the movement to withdraw the limit of entries, Fielding Wallace, of Augusta, an official of the state association, pointed out that in many cases players have traveled several hundred miles only to fail to make the grade by a single stroke.

"It's disappointing to miss the journey by a single stroke and to make the tournament more attractive the limit was raised to take care of every entry," Wallace said. Atlanta's golfers are preparing to leave the city's courses practically deserted during that week. Already more than 100 players have registered from this city and indications point to some 50 more entering before the deadline closes.

Some of the city's players who have retired from tournament competition are planning a comeback in the state meet week after next at Sea Island Beach. Many plan a vacation and a week of golf combined for every entry in the tournament is certain of one practice round at least, a qualifying round, and two rounds of match play. That's a minimum of four 18-hole rounds for every entry.

Guldahl 6-1 To Win 3d. Open Crown

Snead, Picard Quoted at 8 to 1; Luckiest Man Wins, Says Doyle.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.
NEW YORK, June 5.—(AP)—Ralph Guldahl is a 6-to-1 shot to win a third consecutive national open golf championship at Philadelphia this week, but he is not the shortest priced favorite on the records of Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner.

"Bobby Jones was a 4-to-1 choice when he was making his grand slam in 1930," Doyle recalls. "And Gene Sarazen also was 4 to 1 when he won at Fresh Meadow. That is, Sarazen was 4 to 1 when the tournament started."

"However, he had been playing so poorly the price dropped to 20 to 1 the last day. Nobody gave him a chance. Then on the ninth hole of the morning round of the last day he dropped a deuce, and he was off to the races. He played the last 28 holes in an even 100 strokes."

Sam Snead and Henry Picard are second choices in Doyle's book, each at 8 to 1. Behind them, at 12 to 1, are Ed Dudley, Byron Nelson, Dick Metz, Craig Wood, Harry Cooper and Ben Hogan. Others are scattered down the line, although Doyle hastens to add that any of them might win.

NERVE CONTROL TELLS.
"There are about 185 men out there gunning for the title," he explains. "Each can do with his club what any other can do, except for minor exceptions, like Snead's driving, which few can match. So when it comes to the stretch, the last nine or 18 holes when the payoff looms, it becomes a question of individual temperament, or nerve control."

That's when Guldahl is outstanding. He is nervous in the clubhouse. "After all is said, the fellow who wins the national open is just the luckiest. So many factors enter into a sport where most entrants have about the same ability to make shots. The turning over of a ball, a blade of grass, any number of almost trivial incidents might be the difference between being the winner or just one of the boys."

'MUST BE TOUGH NOT TO HAVE AN EDUCATION'

Joe (Cap and Gown) Engel is in town with his front-running Chattanooga Lookouts. The picture above is described as his outstanding pose. Standing before a pillar of learning, Engel says, "It must be tough not to have an education." He sent the picture to Major Trammell Scott to grace the Southern league's president's walls. President Earl Mann, of the Crackers, suggests that if Engel really has the old college spirit he can prove it by swallowing a swordfish.

Roche Faces Luttrell In Main Bout Tonight

Cowboy (Am I tough!) Luttrell and Dorv (I'll find out!) Roche headline a first-class heavyweight wrestling show at the Warren Athletic field tonight at 8:30. Since the athletic field is only a block from Warren Arena, the show will be staged at one of these sites regardless of weather conditions.

Luttrell, champion crowd-baiter in the mat business and ever capable of keeping a mat audience enraged, was declared winner over Roche on a foul after a wild battle here two weeks ago. With a new referee in the ring, Dorv is confident of spilling the wild Texan as bronco—despite Luttrell's illegal use of a taped hand.

Roche is an ex-fighter and is as good as the next one against the tough guys and the Cowboy will have no picnic tonight.

Babe Zaharias, one of Luttrell's main rivals at practicing villainy, encounters John Plummer in the semi-final.

Young Joe Stecher and Nick Elitch open the bill.

A large crowd is expected to take advantage of the lowest prices ever associated with heavyweight wrestling in Atlanta.

MAILHO HOMERS WITH 2 ON BASE; MAULDIN HURT

Al Williams Ejected for Disputing Decision; Teams Idle Today.

By JACK TROY.

There wasn't a dull moment during the two hours and 55 minutes of the Atlanta-Chattanooga brawl last night at Ponce de Leon.

From the time Pitcher Almon Williams, ex-Cracker, was escorted from the park by police because he protested too violently on a called third strike, until Stan Sperry was thrown out by Crip Polli to end the game, the contest was crammed with action. Unfortunately, most of it took place on the Chattanooga side.

The Crackers made a right feeble effort to challenge the Lookouts' right to first place by bowing, 14 to 8, in the opening game of the series.

CROWD OF 9,951.

The 9,951 fans were highly entertained by Chattanooga cannonading. Cracker pitching, it seemed, was a dime a dozen.

Manager Paul Richards used four hurlers in an effort to stem the tide of steady Lookout base hits, but to no avail. Chattanooga collected 19 hits off Johnston, Durham, Stewart and Stein, and the Crackers, for all of their eight runs, were able to get only seven hits all night.

When Williams tried to continue pitching in the fourth after L. Rucker White already had given him the "out" sign and finally left after White called for a police escort, the Crackers had three runs but only one hit.

Rucker walked and Mauldin was hit by a pitched ball and Mailho followed with a home run. This happened in the first inning.

DIDN'T NEED SKILL.
Crip Polli was not in the best of form. The Crackers got to him for four runs in the sixth and another in the seventh. But it was so much wasted effort. As the Crackers would attempt to close the gap, the Lookouts would assault Cracker pitching and make it impossible.

After scoring a run in the first, the Lookouts were held in check until the fifth. Then Johnston was a victim of his own wildness and the Lookouts scored four runs to take a lead they never lost again.

Durham likewise was ineffective. He was the victim of a five-run rally in the sixth. Stewart couldn't make it, either. He was touched for two runs in the seventh and Stein, relieving and getting the side out promptly, allowing the final two runs in the ninth.

NO PITCHING.
There was nothing that even closely resembled pitching on the Cracker side, so Mr. Polli, who was, as said, having no great night himself, found it comparatively easy to coast in to his seventh victory of the season.

There were some things on the Lookout side as five hits and five runs batted in by Babe Barna. And five runs scored by Alex Hooks, who got three hits in as many times at bat. Big Nicholson did not do so bad in batting across runs, himself. He drove in four.

The paid crowd last night was 5,466. So there were almost 5,000 ladies present. The crowd got a big kick out of a sixth-inning Cracker rally which produced four runs, but there was not much hope Continued on Second Sports Page.

POPE SENDS NOTES TO NATIONS IN NEW EFFORT FOR PEACE

Pius Confers With British Minister to Holy See; Chamberlain Rejects Idea of Moscow Visit.

By The Associated Press.

Pope Pius has renewed his efforts to preserve peace in divided Europe.

Informed Vatican sources said yesterday the Pontiff had sent separate notes to Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Poland dealing with specific problems facing the individual governments.

He conferred during the day with the British minister to the Holy See in what was assumed in Vatican circles to have dealt with his latest peace move.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain, questioned in the house of commons whether the Vatican had made representations against a British-French mutual assistance agreement with Soviet Russia, replied "I am not aware of that."

At the same time Chamberlain rejected a suggestion that he attempt to speed the British-Soviet negotiations by a visit to Moscow. Authoritative sources said, however, it was possible he might send Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

In Berlin, meanwhile, unofficial reports said the foreign ministers of Latvia and Estonia were expected there Wednesday to sign non-aggression pacts with Germany.

The projected accords were regarded in the Nazi capital as an indirect consequence of President Roosevelt's April 15 peace note suggesting that Germany give assurances that she would respect the integrity of 31 European states.

Yugoslavia's regent, Prince Paul, quit Berlin after a five-day state visit last night with a lingering handclasp from Reichsfuehrer Hitler, whose government declared the two countries were determined to deepen their political, economic and cultural relations.

Complaints Obtained.

In Budapest, Wilhelm Frick, German minister of the interior, spent the first of a five-day visit yesterday obtaining information on complaints of friction between

The Hungarian government and scattered German minorities. Frick's arrival coincided with the banning of Budapest's leading Nazi newspaper, Magyar Szo, but his official welcome struck a cordial note. The capital was decked out in Nazi banners.

Twenty thousand legionnaires who helped the Nationalists win the Spanish civil war returned home to the acclaim of Premier Mussolini who declared their victory one "against the democracies and Bolshevism."

In a message to the returning soldiers, who landed at Naples, Il Duce declared they had "sealed the union between Spain and Italy with your blood."

Italian Claims Rejected. Directors of the Suez canal company at their annual meeting in Paris rejected temporarily Italian claims for representation in the canal's management and declined to reply to demands which its president said were presented under the theory that "force is the foundation of relations among peoples."

The Suez canal is governed by a board of 19 Frenchmen, 10 Englishmen, two Egyptians and one citizen of The Netherlands. The Britons represent their government, the others private interests. The canal is a gateway to Italy's new Ethiopian empire in Africa and Italians asked a share in its control to satisfy "natural aspirations of the Italian people."

They would be glad to have some reputable company serve them or else form a company themselves to insure good service.

LOUDERMILK ASKS ADEQUATE SERVICE. Vance A. Loudermilk, hotel manager, last night made public a letter to the mayor and council urging "adequate and proper transportation" and declaring he had no intention of entering the transportation field.

"I want 'cab service' and not 'jitney service,'" said Loudermilk, "even at additional cost. I want more and better cabs. I would like to see the visiting public have adequate and proper transportation while in Atlanta."

Loudermilk's letter said he "sympathized" both with the Georgia Power Company and the Black & White Taxicab Company because they were "dealing with the public."

Refusal of Mayor Hartsfield to issue temporary permits to the 100 new drivers Belle Isle is seeking to put on delayed for a time installation of additional cabs.

The drivers waited two hours to see Hartsfield yesterday morning but the mayor did not come in. He talked later with their business agent, Odum, asserting that the permits must be issued by the police committee in the usual way.

Odum's statement concerning labor's position in the warfare quoted Gramling and Johnson as saying: "The labor movement in Atlanta and Georgia as a whole is, and of a necessity must, remain

POLAND TO REMAIN FIRM, SAYS ENVOY

Count Potocki Believes Reich Won't Use Force.

NEW YORK, June 5.—(AP)—Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish ambassador to the United States, told a group of bankers today that he had "sufficient faith in the intelligence" of the leaders of Germany to believe they would "refrain from attempting to satisfy their demands against Poland" by force.

He added, however, that if his faith proved to be "misplaced," Poland would fight to the last man "for freedom and independence."

Calling attention to Poland's location between Russia and Germany, neither of which, he added, "has a too impressive record of friendship for or sympathy with Poland," Count Potocki said: "We are often asked which of the two neighbors is more desirable. Would we rather be allied with Soviet Russia or with Germany? It is just like asking a man whether he would rather have measles or smallpox. The choice is obviously difficult."

neutral in this controversy, inasmuch as this is not a fight between employer and employee but is strictly a fight between two corporations."

Odum asserted that "a certain group" had been telling members of council that labor favored the Georgia Power Company and would cast its 6,000 votes against any member who failed to vote the way the power company wanted. The group is acting without authority, he insisted.

Council referred to the police committee another proposed ordinance to require taxis and buses to have names of owners printed on the sides in letters two inches high, which Acting Chairman John T. Marler, of the police committee, asserted was aimed at operators of negro cabs principally.

Councilman William Knight asked that the pinball ban be referred to the ordinance committee for a public hearing at the request of several owners. There was no discussion on the matter, which was proposed by Mayor Hartsfield.

SLUM CLEARANCE PROJECT ASKED.

A slum clearance project for "Buttermilk Bottom" was asked of the Atlanta Housing Authority yesterday by city council.

Councilman John A. White, who introduced the resolution, explained that "Buttermilk Bottom" is that section around Butler street. He said statistics showed it to have the highest crime and disease figures in the city.

SYNCHRONIZE STOP LIGHTS, JOHNSON TOLD.

The duty of synchronizing Atlanta's traffic signal lights to promote a more rapid flow of traffic was placed upon City Electrician Dewey L. Johnson yesterday by city council in a resolution authored by Councilman John A. White.

White asked the city electrician to enlist the co-operation of the Auxiliary Sale Today To Aid in Maintaining State's Building at N. Y. Fair.

The Auxiliary of the Disabled American Veterans will appear on the streets of Atlanta Tuesday morning to sell Georgia Day buttons celebrating June 14—the day set aside by the New York World Fair officials in honor of the Georgia building in the Court of States. "The business and civic interests of this state have financed the erecting of this magnificent exhibit that depicts the resources of our state," Jere N. Moore, chairman of the World's Fair commission, said last night. "In order to keep this exhibit open, it is necessary to permit all Georgians to participate by purchasing these Georgia Day buttons," he said. The buttons will be on sale only on June 6.

WHEELER DINES SENATE MEMBERS

Group Has Often Held Differences; Keating, Editor, Honor Guest.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, was host today at a luncheon attended by Democratic senators who often have had wide differences of opinion.

Honor guest was Edward Keating, editor of the periodical "Labor." Wheeler and several of those present said the meeting had no political significance, but it at least offered an opportunity for friendly discussion among senators representing divergent viewpoints.

Several similar luncheons have been given at the senate recently, and have been regarded popularly as "harmony conferences" among Democrats. Those present today were Vice President Garner and the following senators:

Barkley of Kentucky, Adams of Colorado, Bailey of North Carolina, Clark of Missouri, Clark of Idaho, Schwellenbach of Washington, Truman of Missouri, Connolly of Texas, Hughes of Delaware, Murray of Montana, Guffey of Pennsylvania, McCarran of Nevada, Herring of Iowa, Wagner of New York, Hatch of New Mexico, Bulow of South Dakota, and Walsh of Massachusetts.

ALL NIGHT PARKING OF TRUCKS BANNED. All-night parking of trucks on Atlanta streets was prohibited yesterday in an ordinance adopted by city council.

The measure makes it against the law for any truck to park longer than two hours between the hours of 7 p. m. and 8 a. m. Spokesmen asserted it would do much to eliminate a dangerous traffic hazard.

NEW ORDINANCE FOR WATER UNIT.

New ordinance governing the water department of Atlanta was adopted yesterday by city council to eliminate many obsolete regulations.

W. Zode Smith, head of the department, said the entire old ordinance was repealed and a new one written to simplify the forthcoming new code.

LIQUOR STORE HOURS NOT CONSIDERED.

A proposal recommended by the police committee to allow liquor stores to close at 11:45 o'clock nightly, instead of 11 p. m., was not considered by city council yesterday. Councilman John T. Marler, acting chairman of the committee, said members asked him to hold it up until next meeting.

COUNCIL ADOPTS TAX ORDINANCE.

Atlanta's 1939-40 tax ordinance, setting the majority of business license fees at the exact figures for the past year, was adopted yesterday by city council.

Brokers' fees remained at $300, although last week the tax committee recommended an increase to $1,000. Councilman Allen Couch, chairman of the tax committee, protested vigorously and sought the higher figure but the other councilmen asserted they had agreed to give the brokers a

HUGE PROFITS CITED FOR AUTO CONCERNS

FTC Reports General Motors Averaged 35.5 Per Cent in Last 10 Years.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—The Federal Trade Commission said today General Motors Corporation has averaged a profit of 35.5 per cent on its operations as a whole in each of the last 10 years.

A commission report to congress said Chrysler Corporation averaged 28.59 per cent, and the Ford Company had a loss of .80 of 1 per cent.

Although reporting that the manufacture of automobiles was 99 per cent centered in seven concerns, the commission said the industry was marked by rigorous competition.

"Active competition among automobile manufacturers," the commission said, "although some of them have made very large profits, gave to the public improved products, often at substantially reduced prices."

"Consumer benefits from competition have probably been more substantial than in any other large industry studied by the commission."

However, the commission criticized car manufacturers for permitting some finance companies to impose what it called exorbitant charges and to practice "serious deception or even direct defrauding of the purchaser."

No companies were named.

T. M. ROBINS WINS ARMY PROMOTION

Nominated To Be Assistant Chief of Engineers.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—President Roosevelt nominated Colonel Thomas Matthews Robins today to be assistant to the chief of army engineers with the rank of brigadier general.

Colonel Robins, a native of Snow Hill, Md., was engineer officer at the debarkation port of Hoboken, N. J., during the World War. Since last year he has been commandant at Fort Belvoir, Va., and the engineering school there.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Captain Leon Claude Covell to be assistant commandant in the coast guard with rank of rear admiral. He has been filling the same post with the rank of captain. Covell was born at Middleville, N. Y.

hearing next week before making any change.

Principal revisions in the new measure are differences in the basis of assessment. The supreme court held assessments on sales volumes unconstitutional, and in the new ordinance production volume, number of employees and stock are employed as bases.

$15,000 FOR PARK SET UP BY COUNCIL.

City council yesterday set up a $15,000 fund for the development of the auditorium park bounded by Peachtree and Ponce de Leon avenues and Edgewood avenue.

The sum of $12,612 also was appropriated to half a dozen departments for routine matters. The $15,000 appropriation came from the sale of the old city hall site.

ORDINANCE TO BAN LEFT TURNS TABLED.

Proposed ordinance to ban left turns at North avenue and Peachtree as an aid to handling traffic at Peachtree and Ponce de Leon avenue was tabled yesterday by city council after long argument.

200 BEER, WINE PERMITS GRANTED.

One liquor license was revoked and approximately 200 beer and wine permits were granted yesterday by city council.

The whisky permit was that of Alex Zampornis, at 460 West Peachtree. Police charged liquor was sold there on Sunday. Granting the beer and wine permits was routine since licenses expire June 30.

BACK SALARY SUIT AGAINST CITY SETTLED.

A back-salary suit for $2,733 filed against the city by C. C. McAfie, a retired city fireman, was settled for $350 yesterday with approval by city council.

McAfie was discharged by the board of firemasters in 1937 but

Kin of Notables Will Get Degrees From the University of Georgia

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., June 5.—The Governor's daughter, a senator's cousin, a fifth generation graduate, and a grandson of a famous chancellor will be among the 700 students to receive degrees at the University of Georgia's commencement exercises next Tuesday.

T. W. Reed, registrar of the university, has learned much about Georgia names in his 30 years in the position, and he likes to find a student whose father or grandfather was graduated from the university, or one who bears a name famous in the state. From among this year's candidates for degrees he could pick out many names with a history.

Heading the list of "famous name" graduates is Geraldine Rivers, the daughter of Governor and Mrs. Rivers. She will receive her bachelor of science in home economics degree at the exercises.

The grandson of Chancellor David Barrow, of the university, is David Francis Crowe, of Athens, who will receive the pharmacy degree. A great nephew of the Chancellor, James Barrow Jr., of Athens, will receive his bachelor of laws at the same time.

Another Athenian graduate, William John Russell Jr., a cousin of Senator Richard B. Russell and a nephew of the late Chief Justice Russell, will receive his bachelor of science in chemistry degree.

CITY AUDITORIUM'S NAME CHANGED.

The name of the city auditorium was officially changed by city council yesterday from "auditorium-armory" to "municipal auditorium."

EXPRESS SYMPATHY ON MRS. BECK'S DEATH.

Resolution expressing the "deepest sympathy" of members of city council over the death of Councilman J. Frank Beck's wife was adopted yesterday by a rising vote. The measure was presented by Alderman Frank Reynolds and Councilman John A. White.

COMMITTEE GIVEN ADVERTISING PLAN.

Proposal by Alderman Raleigh Drennon to require advertisement of every new traffic law in the three Atlanta daily newspapers was referred to the finance committee by city council yesterday.

MAYOR, POLICE CHIEF CRITICIZED BY GROUP.

Criticism of Mayor Hartsfield and Police Chief M. A. Hornsby for sending a motorcycle escort to the Elks convention at Brunswick recently echoed at city council meeting yesterday.

The matter came up when an appropriation of $500 was suggested to pay expenses of sending a five-man committee to New York June 14 to represent the city on Georgia Day at the New York World's Fair.

Councilman J. Allen Couch said the pay of the escort had been held up to be considered later when the mayor attends the next meeting of the finance committee. The proposal for the $500 was referred to the same committee.

HAPPINESS CONTEST LISTS CASH PRIZES

Essay on Theater Film Plus Constitution Ad May Win Money, Tickets.

Just what is your idea of an "invitation to happiness?"

It might be a vacation in the mountains or a cruise. It might be a new evening gown, in which you would have just the grandest time ever.

It might be, if you're just a young man, formal clothes for the grown-up parties you expect to attend now that you're graduated. Whatever your idea of complete happiness, you'll find somewhere in the columns of The Constitution today an ad which is your invitation.

Clip that ad and tell in 50 words or less just why it constitutes your "Invitation to Happiness" and send it to the desk of the "Invitation to Happiness" Editor of The Constitution by 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. For the best entry there will be a cash prize of $5, and for the next two, $3 and $2 respectively.

For the next five judged best, Tommy Read, manager of the Fox theater, will award a pair of tickets each to see Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray in "Invitation to Happiness" opening at his theater Thursday.

NEGRO GRADUATES ARE URGED TO LEAD

70th Commencement at Atlanta University.

"The race with which we are identified is waiting for our leadership to help direct its strivings to the place that it will eventually take among the other races of the world," Harry Herbert Pace, president of the Supreme Liberty Life Insurance Company of Chicago, told the graduates at Atlanta University's 70th commencement yesterday.

"You have arrived at an auspicious time in the life of the world, and if you dedicate and consecrate your talents and training to the service of a people who need you, you will not depart from the fundamentals of true character and right living that you have learned within these hallowed walls."

Thirty-four graduates received degrees at the commencement exercises yesterday morning. For the first time in its history the university conferred the degree of master of social work on four students finishing from the Atlanta University School of Social Work which became affiliated September 1, 1938.

Current Publications Reveal News Concerning Former Atlantans

By Sally Forth.

SALLY'S attention has been called to a recent edition of a San Francisco newspaper in which appeared an excellent likeness of Lieutenant Commander Rufus Thayer and Mrs. Thayer, the latter being the former Anna Harriett Shewmake, of this city. Pictured with the popular navy pair are Commander Campbell Wynne, R. N., of the H. M. S. Orion, and Mrs. Wynne. The photograph was made at the Yerba Buena Club at the San Francisco Exposition, where the distinguished Britishers were luncheon guests of the Thayers on Empire Day. Empire Day, you know, is celebrated by British subjects each year, as it marks the "Queen's Birthday," meaning the late beloved Queen Victoria.

As assistant liaison officer for the United States navy's 12th district, it is Commander Thayer's duty to extend hospitality and welcome to the world's celebrities and to distinguished foreign visitors attending the San Francisco Exposition.

When the British navy's ship Orion, with Commander Wynne in command, anchored in San Francisco bay, the officers were accorded a royal welcome by Uncle Sam's naval officers on duty in the navy's 12th district and their wives. According to newspaper accounts, the ship's officers have been royally entertained during their stay on the Pacific coast. Among brilliant social functions honoring the ship's Commander and Mrs. Campbell was the dinner at which the Maharajah and his son, Prince Kapurthala, were hosts. Commander Thayer and Mrs. Thayer were among the guests attending the exclusive affair.

AS SALLY scanned the unlimited pages of Sunday's New York Times, she came upon the following comment in the society section concerning the betrothal of Belle Hemphill Quinby, of Atlanta and Onancock, Va., and Joseph William Balet Jr., of Pelham, New York:

"Mrs. Littleton Dennis Tesckle Quinby, of Atlanta, Ga., has announced to friends here the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Belle Hemphill Quinby, to Joseph William Balet Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Balet, of Pelham, N. Y. The wedding will take place here Saturday morning in the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, Lexington avenue and Sixty-sixth street.

"The prospective bride, who has been making her home in Atlanta and Onancock, Va., is descended from the earliest English settlers of Georgia and the eastern shore of Virginia. Through her father, the late Mr. Quinby, she is related to the Souths, Littleton and Custis families, and is a descendant of Nathaniel Littleton, who settled in Virginia in 1618. Several of her paternal Cotterill Interviewed on Tweeds in Rich's Specialty Shop.

E. Seton Cotterill, interviewed in Rich's Specialty Shop, stated that when he leaves Atlanta he will go directly to England, where he will start working out colors and materials for fall 1940.

When asked by reporter how he came to be a designer, he replied: "I felt the need of a designer, and since Scotland had none, decided to work with tweeds." He stated he was dissatisfied with the blending of tweeds and worked with the mills. Often in the beginning he would remain in close contact with the small mills in the Scotch villages until today he has his own contracted mills, devoted exclusively to the making of his wonderful materials.

A native of Yorkshire, Mr. Cotterill is in a position to know what's what about tweeds and suedees and has the Englishman's love of fine material and fine tailoring. This same love has made him into one of the world's greatest authorities on such matters.

Mr. Cotterill, ex-officer in the British Air Forces, is most personable, with the true Britisher's erect military carriage and clipped mustache. When asked if he designed his own clothes as well as his wife's and millions of well-dressed women the world over, Mr. Cotterill replied that he did.

He stated he had been a designer for about five years. Replying to the reporter's question as to whether the queen was a "tweed woman" he said: "The queen has the true Scotswoman's love of tweed, and as a young girl on her father's estate wore the district checks of her family." He further stated that the queen's father and the estate servants wore the same color and material.

Questioned as to fall trends, he said: "Green and more green is a big color for fall... It will be featured in my fall collection as a high note." With green, as a natural sequence, of course, will come the lovely rust and brown. In close second importance will be a blend of wine and purple, as a subtle compliment to the Queen's visit to this country and Canada. The vineyard shades are flattering to most women.

The fall collection will feature a hand-loomed shetland, woven with mohair. This blending of mohair and shetland gives a more brilliant sheen and a softer finish... hitherto impossible in tweeds.

Miss Whitehead Weds Mr. Tervin

Of social interest is the announcement made by John Dailey of the marriage of his niece, Miss Sarah Whitehead, to Franklin Quarterman Tervin, of Marianna, Fla., the ceremony having been quietly performed Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. T. H. McConnell, of Marianna, brother of the groom, officiated at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Dailey, and her aunt, Misses Carrie and Sarah Dailey, on Lakeview avenue.

The bride wore a wedding dress of filmy white organdy fashioned with puffed sleeves and a graceful skirt. Her face veil was caught to her hair with gardenias, gathered from the bush planted by her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. John Dailey, at her plantation in Henry county. Her bouquet was formed of gardenias, fern and baby's breath.

After the ceremony the bride's uncle and aunt entertained at a wedding supper at their home on Lakeview avenue, honoring the bridal pair.

Mrs. Richard L. Aeck assisted in entertaining.

Mr. Tervin and his bride left for their home in Marianna, Fla. Mrs. Tervin is the daughter of the late Elbert Jackson Whitehead and the late Anne Lowry Dailey Whitehead, beloved citizens of this section. She attended the University of Georgia and Columbia University.

The groom is the son of the late Franklin Quarterman Tervin and Mrs. Tervin, of DeFuniak Springs, Fla. He graduated from Georgia Tech and is now connected with the United States and Florida state employment service, in Marianna.

Mrs. Richard Leon Aeck entertained recently at a farewell tea at her home on West Andrews drive, honoring the bridal couple.

Miss Frances Alston and Mrs. Douglas Wright assisted the hostess in entertaining her guests.

The home was beautified throughout with varicolored garden flowers.

RICH'S, Atlanta, June 6.—(FLASH)—WORLD OF TOMORROW IN RICH'S FASHION SHOPS OF TODAY!

Man-bites-dog may be news in editorial lingo, but ANTOINES SALON DE BEAUTE is news in any woman's language!

Honest injun if we could choose our little dream-come-true of heaven, we'd settle for that melting and glowing atmosphere of Antoine's Salon De Beaute and die happy!

Our eyes grow wide with wonder when we contemplate the make-up bar, the tip-toe floor, the pink and blue and mauvesness, the muted lights.

Delicious odeurs... soft voices... skilled hands softly patting and moulding you nearer your heart's desire... while you Cleopatra about in a pink leather lounge chair.

You enter all fagged out and weary, maybe the budget didn't balance... or John lost his temper at breakfast, or the twins (bless their little hearts!) told the world... far, far into the night!

An hour or so later... you leave a new woman! A dead ringer for one of those adorable infants at the bottom of the Sixteen Madonna, remember?

The one with the Cherubim head and little wings... that... the coupe infantine (baby hair cut to you).

Perhaps you want to cut a bit of a dash... all right... on the top knot you have it. Paul, Jacques or Miron will snip and slick and coil you up... and Voila! You're a femme fatale!

But enough of that... and this... Sport Shop's showing National Tennis Champ who'll bound over barnacles nicely, too! It's featured on page 54 of Mademoiselle and they call it knee-length-white-dress-with-matlex-shirred-top, your early bird calls it Ballerina Tennis Dress... but whatever you call it... you'll love it and it comes in white and pink. It'll be a museum piece in your summer cotton collection. Wear it with blobs of gold jewelry and you'll be a demure flirt... whatever that is! The price is 4.98.

In the Sports Shop too... swimming suit to end all swimming suits! We take to it like it takes to water... made of cotton that's been treated or something and the most devastating thing we've seen in many a milestone. Smeary flower-printed, of mingley looking stuff... all blue and brown and tannish, as tho a painter had cleaned his brushes on it. Oh... so feminine, sea-worthy as the Queen Mary and twice as smart! It can be had... for 6.98!

In the Glove Shop a pair of gloves who wash like Mary's little lamb. In crisp white pique. Happily adapted to summer comfort... we wonder how we lived without them all this time. They'll be good and cool when the weather's good and hot... they're 1.50 a pair.

To our bosom we take a bed jacket from the First Floor Lingerie Shop. Very Jane Austen in broderie Anglaise (old-fashioned eyelet embroidery), and it's sweeping the country like a hit tune! In white with your choice of pink or blue ribbands flitting thru the heading. Elegant for breakfast in bed... and 1.98.

Eye-catching as a circus poster is a little mesh shirt, by Malibu, styled in California, shown at Rich's Belt Shop. Rainbow striped, man-worthy collar... cool as Sea Island... hefty-shouldered and you can tuck it in or let it hang out, for 1.98.

To men only... if you know a tidy gal, who likes to do her face up nicely... (and what gal doesn't?) you'll make a hit with Helena Rubinstein's little make-up kit for 2.00... that bags itself in stop-red kid. The top flips open to disclose lotion, pasteurized face cream and make-up film. She'll pack it in her beach bag, and think fondly of you... even after she meets that tall, handsome lad who sings tenor in the Casino band!

That's all this time... so till next Tuesday... watch for the Avocados deserve wider popularity. Not only are they considered a delicacy, therefore quite acceptable as party fare, but they are a valuable fruit and as such should be added to your repertory.

Good Luck Salad Lovely For a Bride's Luncheon

By SALLY SAVER

A good luck salad it is, and lucky will be the persons to whom it is served! For it is a horseshoe of avocado decorated with "jeweled" nails, the "nails" cut from cranberry or any red jelly, and the whole served on a bed of frozen salad or sherbet.

This good luck salad would be most appropriate for a bride's luncheon, but it would be appropriate also for any occasion where good wishes are in order; for a "going away" party, for example.

The avocado is chilled and peeled and cut in horseshoe shape. If you are using, say, a frozen cheese salad for foundation, the decorations would be red cherries. But if you are using, say, a frozen cheese salad for foundation, the decorations would be red cherries.

A pineapple sherbet which would be suitable for a base if the salad is to be a dessert or sweet salad is made thus:

Adopted Child Can Be Great Treasure

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I am one of the unfortunate women who cannot have children, which is a bitter grief to me and my husband. We talk of adopting a baby but sensitiveness holds us back. My sisters and brothers have little ones of their own and we are afraid they would watch our adopted baby with eagle eye attributing everything that's not perfect to an unknown heritage. Father and mother discourage me, telling me that children are a fearful responsibility and if they don't come naturally it's best not to assume the responsibility. I notice that all parents complain of the responsibility but are mighty glad to have it and I can't see that an adopted child would be more of a care than one's own. Please talk it over with us. ON THE FENCE.

Answer: Such an interesting commentary on human nature, your letter is, my dear lady. Aren't we all unduly sensitive about our points of difference from other people? And don't we frequently let this sensitiveness run away with us, cheat us of happiness which we might otherwise have; and spoil our lives? The childless woman feeling ashamed in the presence of her luckier sisters—and somewhat inferior!

It's also running true to form for the full to tell the empty that there's no fun in being full. The haves to tell the have-nots that having doesn't constitute happiness; for the parents who have children and grandchildren to tell the childless daughter that parenthood is a sellout, rearing a family an awful responsibility which none should envy; that what they have had and enjoyed in it is not necessary to anybody but themselves.

My advice is: Forget the family, skip their comments and their counsel, quit thinking of what they might say and do, go along and adopt your baby, just as you married your husband, without considering how they might receive him. Adopt your baby and bring him up according to the books. The Good Book and the modern scientific books—and there's no reason why he shouldn't turn out as well as the children of your sisters and brothers. All who have children give hostages to fortune; those that bear and those that adopt them.

Yes, there will be sleepless nights and heart aches, fears and tears, sacrifices and responsibilities; anguish of heart and mind before you have finished. There will also be indescribable joys and heart swellings, laughter, pleasure and happiness; for this is love and life.

Who would deny you these things? Surely not the parents who had such experience with you. Surely not the brothers and sisters to whom Fate has been so generous. Who then? No body can deny you and you needn't deny yourself.

FEMININE NATURE: Rare is the woman who can push her thoughts past the point that her instincts bid her stop thinking.

Rooms Designed To Suit Man And Woman

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"The bride wore her mother's wedding dress" read the descriptions in the society columns. But that was about the only old-fashioned thing you could say about Louise R. and Lee M., who are getting married this month. For she's very much a modern young lady with a job she intends to keep and a little house that looks like tomorrow.

BIG AND SHAGGY.
The walls of the living room are pale grey, the ceiling chartreuse yellow. The rug is big and rather shaggy and grey like the walls. Most of the furniture is in brown leather, part of it upholstered, part of it lacquered in ribbed strips and swung on frames like beach chairs. Two gallant wing chairs, flanking a mirrored fireplace, are slip covered in a chartreuse homespun material. The curtains are chartreuse nylon made very plain to hang straight to the floor. All the furniture is in bleached wood and accessories are in bamboo and copper. The dining alcove adjoining isn't considered as an extra room, but merges right into the same design—object, greater spaciousness. Altogether a smart young room planned to please a man who likes tailor-made comfort and to set off a sleek young woman with red hair.

NOT TOO FEMININE.
Their bedroom has chartreuse walls and curtains and furniture painted the exact same tone. The floor is covered in old-time natural matting, while slip covers and spreads are in light grey. Again—a gay and sunny room that isn't too feminine and so will be as satisfying for Lee as for Louise. The kitchen is painted all in palest grey with a grey linoleum—and just for fun curtains in wide, wide awning striped red and white cotton. And a row of white and red pottery plates hanging on the wall.

If you have old furniture that needs doing over, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Boykin, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, for her bulletin, "How to Refresh Hardwoods." It tells how to do over the wood itself as well as how to bleach it.

MY DAY Preparations Complete For Royal Visitors

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK—I flew back to New York Friday night from Boston, feeling that my two young people would be better without an extra person to think about. Anne's mother is with her, and there is nothing more I could do.

It was very pleasant to slip into my own bed at Hyde Park late at night and to wake up to a very beautiful world Saturday morning. Immediately after breakfast on Saturday morning, I went over to see my mother-in-law and to talk over certain things about her preparations for next week's royal visit. Sometimes I cannot help wondering whether royal visitors ever have the same kind of qualms about the people with whom they are going to stay, that we ordinary mortals have. I always wonder whether I shall have the right clothes and whether my hosts will find having people attached to the President's family more of a burden than a joy.

The young royalties, however, must realize by now how anxious everybody is to see them. The Queen has won the hearts of her Canadian subjects and many Americans, by what they consider her courage and informality. The fact that she steps down into the crowds and that the King goes with her, I think, made a tremendous impression.

I don't doubt that in charge of the safety of these two wish that they were easier to handle, but their actions are certainly making them very popular. This country as a whole feels great respect for the young King and Queen, and everywhere you heard words of praise for the King's quiet and dignified bearing.

I could not help feeling very sorry for them as I read of the Queen Mother's accident. It must have been such a shock. Their anxiety as to show she will recover from it must still be great. Their royalties are not expected to allow their feelings to interfere with their duties. These long journeys when children are left behind must have many moments of anxiety.

I can well remember when the President was assistant secretary of the navy and we used to go on trips to various navy yards, how on the last few nights before we reached home, I always used to think of the world had happened to the children, even though I knew perfect care had been taken of them. Perhaps even a Queen may have the same worries.

Everyone has asked me whether all the arrangements are complete. I am glad to be able to say that, when I leave here Tuesday morning, I think all I can do for the comfort of our guests will have been done. Of course, an old house cannot be changed and my mother-in-law does not often entertain so many guests in her home, but she is enjoying her preparations very much. We hope everyone will be comfortable and happy.

Home Institute Booklet Tells How to Play Tennis

Right in the thick of the fun is Joyce—in demand for country club dates, tennis.

And why not? She brushed up on authentic tennis rules, taught herself to play a fast, clever game. Spunky, but not hard to do. Once you know the rules, easy to remember not to make such boners as the one sketched at top right—serving with one foot over the baseline. This foot fault costs you a point, causes good players to put you in the dub class.

Correct to serve with both feet behind the baseline—as in sketch at lower right. Nor do you jump;—with both feet in the air—while you serve. Speed in playing is largely a matter of footwork—and the trick is to keep moving, not be caught flat-footed as your opponent returns your ball.

Clever to practice running with little steps—backward as well as forward. If you remember how you used to dodge in "tag," run this way and that—and that tennis is a lot like tag—you soon get the idea.

And of course when you know the simple strategy of tennis you can easily hold your own. Remember, a good player will always try to force you out of your "safety position"—which is about four feet back of the baseline in the middle. Be smart, return to it after every shot, except when volleying.

In our new 40-page booklet, "How to Improve Your Tennis," Mercer Beasley, well-known teacher of champions, shows you by instructions and diagrams how to play good tennis. Explains different strokes, footwork, offensive and defensive tennis. Gives charts illustrating tennis strategy, pointers on tournament tennis, official rules. For beginners as well as advanced players.

2. How many presidents of the United States were born British subjects?
3. When did congress pass the first pension bill?

ONE-MINUTE TEST ANSWERS.
1. No. There have been a number of congressmen of part Indian blood, however, and one vice president, Charles Curtis.
2. The first seven. William Henry Harrison (the ninth) was born in 1773 before the Declaration of Independence, and therefore was born a British subject.
3. The first act granting pensions was passed August 26, 1776, by the Continental Congress.

Try Ten Minutes Of Exercising Each Day

By Ida Jean Kain.

Women are always agog when some celebrity noted for her youthful appearance turns out to have grown children. They instantly yearn to know how she does it and wonder if there isn't some mystery about her. Certainly the Countess Mara—Luvilla Mara de Vescovi, if you want it all—is just such a provocative personality, with her two grown daughters, her flair for style, her undeniable beauty and her slim, youthful figure.

But the countess does not believe in mystery—she pins her faith to exercise and declares that suppleness is the whole secret of youth.

"Too many women," she says, "feel that a good and expensive foundation garment is all that is needed to retain a youthful figure. Such a garment is certainly important, but underneath there must be firm muscles."

That does not mean violent exercise, and it might be actually harmful for you to attempt the vigorous contortions intended for an athlete.

Since the countess is a designer and a very busy woman, her exercise time is necessarily limited and in order to be sure of getting her exercises into the day's schedule, she does them the first thing every morning. The routine is so simple and sensible that you may be impelled to adopt it as your own. If so, allow at least 10 minutes a day for the exercises.

Countess Mara says "Ten minutes a day can trim 10 years off your figure."

Begin arousing the circulation even before you hop out of bed. Remove the pillow so that you are lying flat on the back, hands close to the sides, palms down. Keeping the knee straight, raise the right leg so an angle of about 45 degrees, then lower and raise the left leg.

Do the next exercise on a mat or rug. Lie at full length, elbows bent and hands up about shoulder level in front. Roll completely over, first to one side, then back to the other side.

For the poise that goes with a graceful carriage, this one is recommended: Stand with knees together, right foot slightly forward, hands on hips. Keep the right leg perfectly straight, and slowly bend the left knee and lower yourself to the floor. (Well, try it, anyway!) The trick is not to lose your balance. Now, place the left foot forward and repeat.

The most novel tip of all is an exercise for the throatline: Pretend that you are watching an airplane maneuver in the skies: raise the eyes upward, then turn the head to the far right, back to center, and to the far left.

Woman's Quiz

Q. Why do cats land on their feet when falling, especially when turned over?

A. It is due to a reflex action which they perform as unconsciously as a person closes his eyes when somebody suddenly makes a pass at him. Cats have fine balancing and good muscular co-ordination.

Q. What are the chief sources for honey in this country?

A. Sweet clover, white and alkali clovers, and alfalfa. Distinctly flavored honeys come also from the tupelo trees of the south, oranges, from the wild sage of the foothills of California, star-thistle of the Pacific coast, buckwheat, mesquite and fireweed.

Q. How may a kerosene stove be kept in good condition?

A. Wash with soap and water, or soda and water when very greasy and, when cold, wipe off with kerosene or a mixture of two parts kerosene and one part turpentine.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, give your name and address, enclose a 3-cent postage stamp and mail to The Woman's Editor of The Constitution, Washington Service Bureau, 1813 13th Street, Washington, D. Atmosphere Becomes Tense; Ex-Wives, Hubbies Arrive

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, June 5.—I ask Bette Davis for the truth regarding those rumors of a feud with Miriam Hopkins. "Nothing to it," she assures me. "We are very friendly—up here," pointing to her tongue. "But not down here," pointing in the direction of her heart. And adds, "Miriam is a great fighter for what she wants, which is all right, too." ... Barbara Stanwyck says that the first time she realized the unimportance of money was after a recent birthday of her son Dion. She bought him a houseful of expensive toys, all of which he discarded for a brightly colored marble. ... Cary Grant moans, "I can't save any money." He receives only $150,000 a picture.

The incident of the week took place at Marcell's restaurant. First, Hedy Lamarr came in with Gene Markey. Then Joan Bennett, Markey's ex-wife, came in with Walter Wanger. Then Reginald Gardiner, Miss Lamarr's first Hollywood escort arrived with Mary Brian. Followed by Cary Grant, who was ditto with Miss Brian. Shortly afterward came Lee Bowman with Wendy Barrie, and, five minutes later, Joy Hodges, once engaged to Bowman, was escorted by Richard Greene, who was recently on the verge of matrimony with Wendy. The atmosphere was not less tense when the orchestra played, "I Get Along Without You Very Well."

The strange case of Isa Miranda and Paramount. The Italian actress was brought here two years ago by Paramount, which paid her $2,500 a week for a year and a half with the idea that she would learn to speak English and play the lead in "Zaza." When that picture went into production, Miss Miranda's English was not good enough, so Claudette Colbert took the part and was paid $150,000. Then Paramount decided to resurrect "Hotel Imperial," on which nearly a million dollars had already been spent, first with Dietrich in the role, then with Margaret Sullivan.

This time, with Miss Miranda,

Lack of Calcium Shows Child's Development

By Dr. William Brady.

Children grow at a gradually decreasing rate per year from birth up to the age of 18 to 25 years. Although there is little increase in stature after the age of 19 or 20 years as a rule, still development is by no means completed then, for physical maturity is attained at the age of 24 in men and the age of 21 in women (averages). Character, too, is fully developed at maturity—perhaps calcium (and phosphorus) metabolism has a good deal to do with character. Phosphorus is of secondary importance because the calcium intake determines or controls the absorption and retention of phosphorus. Take care of your calcium and the phosphorus will take care of itself.

As already stated, the time of greatest need for calcium is in childhood from the age of eight or ten years to 18. In the teens growth is rapid and the demand for calcium, and of course for sunshine vitamin D which is essential for utilization of calcium in the body, is great. If the daily intake of calcium and vitamin D is restricted the growing child is certain to suffer physically, and, I believe, in development of character. It is a physiological fact that a shortage of calcium or vitamin D manifests itself in neuro-muscular irritability, or as the layman might call it, "nervousness" or nervous weakness, and the youth reacts abnormally to everyday stimuli or emotions.

From theory and considerable observation and experience I believe that shortage in the daily calcium and vitamin intake has a good deal to do with the restlessness and the abnormal craving for "something to steady the nerves" that accounts for cultivation of the tobacco and alcohol habits.

If nudity (not nudism) were the universal and conventional custom, and milk and cheese and eggs and fresh fruit in season were standard diet for growing children, the physical and moral health of the nation would be on a higher plane. Action of sunshine or skyshine on the skin causes the body to manufacture its own vitamin D. The undernourished or unrefined foods mentioned are the best sources of calcium (and phosphorus). Plain wheat is the best food source of vitamin B-complex—the third factor in which the everyday diet is generally deficient.

It is not so easy as it may sound to include these essentials in the everyday diet. Indeed it requires more firmness and vigilance than the average malnourished individual can apply to the problem day by day and week by week. The alternative course is to supplement the daily diet by eating along with breakfast every day, or divide into portions with each a fair day's ration of vitamin D and vitamin B-complex. This is a good health habit for everybody, particularly for children who have not yet attained complete development.

(Signed letters pertaining to "personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Being in the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address: Dr. William Brady, care The Atlanta Constitution.)

the picture is a failure. But, instead of calling it quits with the actress who has meant a loss to the studio of several hundred thousand dollars, she will shortly make another picture for the studio. It must be nice to have so much money to burn.

Norma Shearer drinks fruit juices between "takes" to keep up her strength. And Ann Sheridan fools her intimates by drinking milk from a highball glass. ... Anita Louise's fiancé, Buddy Adler, has asked us to forget the "Buddy." In future, he will be known as "Maurice." He says the name is more suitable for the mate of a movie actress. ... David Niven complains, "Everyone asks me when I'm going to get married." "Why don't you?" I rise to the bait. "Well, when are you?" "How should I know?" replies David. "If he doesn't, I don't know who would." ... Fred Astaire told the London reporters about his new dancing partner, Eleanor Powell, "Our styles are quite different. She's a tap dancer." I wonder what that makes Astaire?

Garbo's car and chauffeur wait outside while Garbo is being fitted for the expensive gown she will wear in "Ninotchka." When Garbo finally emerges, she is wearing a long, shapeless coat, a handkerchief round her head and no make-up. I think I know what Cary Cooper meant when he said movie stars owe it to their public to look glamorous. Anyone more disillusioning than Garbo in the flesh it is impossible to imagine. ... Errol Flynn tells me, "Even if I left the movies, I'd still make money." "How?" I ask. "Writing indorsements," he replied. Errol reckons that, at the present rate of demand, he would earn $50,000 a year.

Jim Preston, technical adviser for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and formerly the superintendent of the press gallery in the Washington senate, was given the job of choosing extras to play senators for the 76th congress, in the picture, of course. These were his specifications—average age 52, weight 175 pounds, height 5 feet 10 inches, and hair gray. What about it, Washington?

A "Perfect Design" By Barbara Bell

Here's the perfect design (1763-B) for your "good silk dress"—you know, the one you reach for more often than any other in your wardrobe. The type in which you always feel well-dressed and smart, because the lines are simple, well-bred and absolutely right. It's nice for summer, afternoons in town and for travel, too. It just can't help having a nice figure in a dress cut so beautifully—with lengthening princess panels, high shoulders, bosom gathers, and a flattering, narrow roll collar. The bodice fullness is so placed as to give the effect of a vestee; it's very soft and becoming.

Make this of flat crepe, silk print, georgette or chiffon, and rest assured it will make you look as slim and suave and smart as you want to look!

Barbara Bell pattern No. 1763-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 7/8 yards of 38-inch material with long sleeves; 4 1/4 yards for short—plus 3-4 yard contrasting for collar and vestee.

Send for Barbara Bell's spring and summer pattern book! Make your own smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, carefully planned designs! It's chic, it's easy, it's economical, to sew your own. Each pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

PUZZLE-WORKERS

Here's a dictionary of mythology and religion convenient for crossword puzzles and figures of speech.

In literary contests and crossword puzzles many of the definitions to be answered call for the names of characters in mythology. In such cases the ordinary dictionary is of little value. But in this booklet if you wish to find the "Greek Goddess of Dawn," you look under "dawn" and find "Eos, Greek," which is the correct answer. And if it's the Roman, Egyptian, or Mexican goddess you are after, you'll find it under "dawn."

House Quizzes Chamberlain On Death of 99 in Submarine

Prime Minister Promises Full Public Inquiry Into Tragedy.

LONDON, June 5.—(AP)—Promising a "full public inquiry" into the sinking of the submarine Thetis, Prime Minister Chamberlain rose personally in the house of commons today to give the puzzled British public an official account of the disaster.

He presented what he described as a full account of the accident "so far as the facts are yet known," and said that "so far as can be ascertained" the sinking of the Thetis last Thursday with loss of 99 of 103 men aboard "was caused by flooding of the two forward compartments through one of the bow torpedo tubes."

"The rear door of one of these tubes," he said, "came open or was thrown open through reasons which cannot be fully explained."

Not overloaded.

In the face of criticism of the fact that the 103 men aboard the Thetis were approximately double the craft's normal complement, Chamberlain asserted the presence of builders' representatives and others "normally carried" in such acceptance trials "in no way contributed to the sinking of the submarine."

The prime minister said the signalling apparatus of the Thetis was destroyed by the impact with which the craft hit the bottom, and he declared that exceptionally strong tides made it "impossible to undertake diving operations" except in slack water.

He disclosed also that the submarine was lost for about four hours Friday night, when those aboard presumably had about six hours' supply of air left, after a pontoon wire broke the marker buoy.

He said attempts to move the craft failed as hawsers broke.

1,300-Word Statement. Chamberlain, grave of face, presented a 1,300-word prepared statement and then answered numerous questions.

The loss of life, greatest in the history of undersea craft, had aroused the country's press to make strong demands for a thorough investigation.

The promised "full public inquiry" in addition to the "usual naval investigation" will be a departure from the tradition of keeping naval affairs private. It is to be held "as soon as the submarine has been salvaged."

As Chamberlain discussed the tragedy before parliament the admiralty announced plans for memorial services for the victims to be held Wednesday over the wreck, with 150 relatives attending aboard the minesweeper Hebe. Services also are planned for the same day at dockyard churches at Portsmouth, Devonport and Chatham and in the central square at Birkenhead.

3 HEROES ARE CITED IN SQUALUS REPORT

Performance of New Life-Saving Equipment, Efficiency Also Commended.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(AP)—A blend of heroism, calm efficiency and sterling performance of new life-saving equipment accounted for the rescue of 33 men from the submarine Squalus, Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole informed the Navy Department today.

Admiral Cole, commander of the Portsmouth navy yard and officer in charge of the rescue, reported to Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, his 20-page report described the life-saving operation in unemotional language, but nevertheless three heroes stood out in clear relief in the account.

They were: Martin C. Sibitzky, United States navy, Padicktown, N. J.; William Badders, chief machinist's mate, 95 East street, Annapolis.

John Mihalowski, 11 Home street, New London, Conn., diver. Sibitzky was the first diver to go down to the Squalus, lying nearly 250 feet deep off Portsmouth. He attached to the submarine what divers call the "down-haul" which permitted the rescue chamber to be hauled down and to take off the survivors in four trips.

Admiral Cole said of Sibitzky: "The extremely skillful work of this first diver resulted in marked expedition of the whole rescue operation and contributed greatly to its ultimate success."

Badders and Mihalowski descended in the rescue chamber, after the survivors had been taken off, and opened the torpedo room hatch to see if the room were flooded. Water poured into the rescue chamber, proving the torpedo room was filled with water, and they refastened the hatch.

Admiral Cole paid high tribute to the efficiency of the rescue chamber, developed largely by the navy.

DEATH JUMP PLAN OF YOUTH AVERTED

Heeds Pleadings and Leaves Perch on Building.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 5.—(AP)—For half an hour late today a 19-year-old youth stood on a parapet on the 20th floor of the Medical Arts building in the Loop and threatened to jump off as hundreds of persons watched from Ninth street and Nicollet avenue.

Then, heeding the pleadings of Policeman Harold Eisenkramer and building employees that they would help him get a job, he climbed down from his lofty perch and was taken to police headquarters. Police Captain Einar Jonassen said the youth gave his name as Robert L. Evans, of St. Paul, who recently had been in a CCC camp near Seattle.

Jonassen quoted Evans as saying he was desperate because he could not find work.
